Williams Says U. S. Is Rationing Bombs

WASHINGTON AP -- Republican Sen. John J. Williams said today the United States is "rationing bombs" in Viet Nam.

He coupled that with a charge the administration "allowed the situation to deteriorate in Viet Nam" during President Johnson's 1964 campaign against Republican challenger Barry Goldwater.

"Why have the American people not been told the truth about the seriousness of the situation in Southeast Asia?" Williams asked in a speech prepared for a conference of Republican women.

"Shortages have developed. We are now rationing bombs and other military supplies," the Delaware senator said. "Why did the administration fool the American people? Was the election of any public official more important than the life of an American boy?"

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has denied U.S. forces in South Viet Nam face supply shortages.

Williams said that during the campaign Johnson "accused Goldwater of being a trigger-happy warmonger for proposing some of the same military steps that he took immediately after the election".

Goldwater addresses the GOP women after Williams today.

Williams said he was not passing judgment on the wisdom of the military steps ordered by Johnson in the Vietnamese war.

"But why were Goldwater's suggestions denounced so viciously during the campaign and then after the election adopted by President Johnson?" he asked.

Williams did not say what Goldwater suggestions he had in mind.

"Why did Mr. McNamara, the secretary of defense, early in 1964 promise that American boys would be home by Christmas when they knew conditions in that area were rapidly deteriorating?" Williams asked.

He added: "To show just how bad the administration allowed the situation to deteriorate in Viet Nam during the campaign months, I quote Secretary McNamara's statement on Nov. 20, 1964, just two weeks after the elections.

"This statement was in response to a newsman's request to interview Gen. Maxwell Taylor, former ambassador to Viet Nam:

"It would be impossible for Max to talk to these people without leaving the impression that the situation is going to hell."

School Tax Confuses

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri legislators hammered away again today on two major problems, trying for adjournment of the special session during the day.

House and Senate conferees worked out a compromise Wednesday on the final catch-all appropriations bill. Its chances of acceptance appeared good.

But a proposed constitutional amendment on school taxes was mired in a confused conflict.

Originally it was designed to keep a local school tax levy from dropping back to the basic $1.25 levy if voters defeated a proposed increase.

But during its course through the House it picked up a complex amendment that would allow 25 per cent of the voters or 10,000, whichever number was smaller, to petition for a tax reduction if (1) the school board made no change in the levy or (2) if a levy increase was defeated.

The Senate, after two hours of confusion, refused to accept that Wednesday night and sent the measure back to the House, asking for a conference attempt at compromise.

The House had refused earlier to grant a conference on its own version of the proposal.

Senate opponents said the House plan would cause more problems than it would solve. They suggested the whole issue be postponed until the regular legislative session next January.

Even the sponsor, Sen. Willian B. Waters, D-Liberty, admitted it had some flaws but said it was in fair shape for presentation to the voters.

Leaders of both houses looked for final adjournment during the day but the session could run until the constitutional deadline, Friday at midnight.

Viet Nam War Spilling Into Laos and Cambodia

BOY AND GIRL Scout troops of the Okeechobee District received $100 yesterday from the Lions Club for their activity funds. The two checks were presented to Bill Huff, right, for the Girl Scouts, and Judge Marshall Craig, center, for the Boy Scouts, from Lions Club President Ken Smitten.

WASHINGTON AP -- The war in Viet Nam has been spilling over into Laos and Cambodia and the United States is encountering more difficulty in obscuring the fact.

Two unusual official disclosures in the last three days have thrown fresh light on the involvement in combat actions of territories in both Laos and Cambodia.

In Washington, the Defense Department reported for the first time on casualties in air operations over Laos.

The reports showed that in the past two years 11 U.S. flyers have been killed there and somewhat fewer than 20 others have been listed as missing or captured by Communist forces.

And in Saigon, a U.S. spokesman confirmed accounts from news correspondents on the scene that last Saturday American artillery fired across a boundary river into Cambodian jungles to silence enemy guns when U.S. troops ran into heavy fire from Viet Cong forces on the Cambodian side.

Washington authorities asserted that in the prolonged operations over Laos and in the brief clash across the Cambodian border, the Communists were responsible for initial violations of territory outside Viet Nam and that the U.S. fire was defensive.

Officials in Washington denied that this week's unusual disclosures resulted from any policy decision to signal a new and broader phase of warfare in Southeast Asia. Basic U.S. policy, they said, is still to keep the conflict confined to Viet Nam but Communist actions sometimes force counteractions outside that country.

When such actions do occur the practice of the State and Defense departments have been to say nothing about them if possible and otherwise to make minimum disclosure. The justification offered for this practice is that sensitive relations with other governments are involved.

As the Viet Nam war grows in intensity, however, it is now recognized here that the policy of silence may very well be more difficult to maintain.

In the current case of the report of casualties suffered over Laos, officials said the Defense Department had received queries about a week ago concerning notification given to a family of a lost flyer. The family reportedly was informed that the loss had occurred over Laos.

When Pentagon officials looked into the matter, it was said, they found that the identification of Laos as the scene of combat operations had been given in notices sent to a number of families and they therefore decided that since this information had been officially provided to next of kin they should issue a casualty report in response to inquiries.

In the case of the fight across the Cambodian border, officials

B52 Bombers Continue Plastering Stronghold

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- High-flying B52 bombers plastered the Viet Cong stronghold near the Cambodian border today for a fifth successive day.

The American Stratoforts dropped their 750-pound bombs on a suspected Communist arms factory and training area 75 miles northwest of Saigon.

Over North Viet Nam, U.S. Air Force and Navy fighter-bombers renewed their attacks in force after a two-day lull during which their flights were almost washed out by monsoon rains.

In the renewed aerial assaults in the north, a U.S. spokesman reported that an F105 Thunderchief was shot down by enemy ground fire 65 miles northeast of Hanoi. The pilot parachuted and was seen on the ground but a rescue attempt was thwarted by heavy antiaircraft fire.

It was the 229th U.S. plane reported lost over North Viet Nam.

An Air Force F42 Phantom jet ditched off the coast of South Viet Nam near the Cam Ranh Bay air base, 170 miles northeast of Saigon, after it ran out of fuel Wednesday. Both crewmen ejected and were rescued.

All 21 U.S. servicemen aboard a U.S. Army CH47 Chinook helicopter were killed when the helicopter caught fire and crashed Wednesday night in heavy jungle 110 miles northeast of Saigon.

It was one of the worst helicopter disasters of the war. A spokesman said the big helicopter "burst into flames in the air but there was no evidence of enemy action." Aboard were an Army crew of five and 16 soldiers.

U.S. and other allied combat dead nearly doubled last week, while the number of Viet Cong killed declined to the second lowest level of the year, the allied military commands reported.

The losses on both sides continued to reflect a relative lull in the ground war, with total casualties below figures earlier in the year.

A U. S. spokesman reported 70

$302 Million Cut From Johnson

WASHINGTON AP -- The House Appropriations Committee slashed more than $302 million today from the $14.3 billion President Johnson requested to finance 24 federal agencies next year.

It was the first substantial reduction recommended by the committee in five big money bills this session. The committee's approval of several hefty increases in earlier bills has prompted the President to criticize congressional spenders.

But if the committee's action today is sustained next week by the House, it may evoke more presidential criticism.

Among other cuts, the committee knocked out the entire $19.7 million requested to get Project Mohole going. This is a National Science Foundation project to drill deep into the earth beneath the seat to try to find out about the earth's age, make-up and other scientific data. Congress has provided $55.4 million for the project over the past four years.

In ordering the project terminated, the committee said the cost already has greatly exceeded original estimates and the additional money requested "can be more advantageously used in other activities."

The committee let the ax fall on another administration project--the rent subsidy program enacted last year to provide better private housing for low-income families through a system of supplemental payments to landlords.

The President requested $35 million for new rent subsidy contracts for next year plus $3 million for payments on contracts already made. The committee cut the new funds to $20 million and chopped $1 million from the 1966 payments.

It included language limiting use of any of the money to projects "officially approved by the local community concerned." Minority groups have interpreted this provision as designed to keep them out of new suburban housing.

The over-all budget of the Department of Housing and Urban Development was cut from $710.4 million to $637 million. The reductions included $5 million in urban planning grants, $8 million in grants to develop neighborhood facilities and $10 million in payments to local housing authorities.

The entire $5.1 million requested for grants for training programs in community development was turned down.

Raise $1,400 In Sikeston

The American Cancer Society's 1966 April Crusade has ended with $1,400 raised in Sikeston.

John Scarbrough and Dan Limbaugh, chairman of the crusade, said this is only a preliminary figure.

While the crusade is officially at an end, Scarbrough and Limbaugh made two appeals for continued action: If for some reason or other, a volunteer has not been able to reach certain families, make another effort to reach them and if you-- a member of the public -- did not contribute during the crusade, do so now by sending a contribution to the American Cancer Society, P. O. Box 201, Sikeston, Mo. Also ask for a copy of a leaflet giving the basic ways you can help protect yourself from death from cancer.

Scarbrough and Limbaugh were enthusiastic in praise of the work of all the volunteers. "Of course," they said, "it meant tired feet and hands, time and energy.

Mrs. Billie Burch, the Scott County chairman, said returns are still coming in and the final total for the county should be over $2,000.

Deserters In Viet Nam War

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP-- A lot of soldiers on both sides are deserting in Viet Nam.

Defections from the Communist Viet Cong are running more than 2,300 a month, American officials report.

Against this, the officials say desertions from the South Vietnamese regular army run currently at 6,600 a month, with additional desertions from the regional and the popular forces.

These figures must be considered in proportion. The government military strength is estimated at 600,000, including auxiliary units. The Viet Cong guerrillas, plus North Vietnamese regulars and village auxiliaries, are estimated to total 200,000 to 250,000.

Most deserters from the South Vietnamese army do not go over to the Viet Cong. Instead they return to their homes, go into hiding or filter into the cities looking for work. Some reenlist later.

The rate of desertion -- nothing new in this land -- continues to cause deep concern for both the South Vietnamese government and the American military.

They draw some encouragement from the rising number of Viet Cong defections.

These totaled 2,336 in March, the highest so far, and American officials say a quarter of them were officers. Viet Cong defections, less than 1,000 a month last year, rose to 1,672 in January and 2,011 in February.

Last Ditch Look

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- The House and Senate took a look today at the last ditch compromise appropriation bill their conferees finally produced late Wednesday.

It was up nearly half a million dollars in general revenue from the Senate version but still was over $700,000 below the figure the House approved earlier.

The House-Senate conference committee worked behind closed doors for many hours before settling on figures they hoped both houses would find acceptable.

The final product showed these changes from the tight bill the Senate passed:

For an attendant training program at St. Louis State School and Hospital, $64,000. The House had approved $100,000 for additional personnel at the institution but the Senate had deleted the item.

Land acquisition and development of state parks, $50,000 for a total of $200,000.

For a federal - state program of prisoner rehabilitation, $43,000 in state money which will make about $500,000 in federal money available.

For the newly created office of state and regional planning, $115,500.

Relief To Be Sent

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Army is preparing to provide more than 100,000 replacements for Viet Nam this summer and fall.

The other services also face the replacement problem, but to a lesser degree than the Army, which has pumped the greatest number of troops by far into Viet Nam since the buildup began last July.

Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told Congress in recently released testimony that "the big demand for replacements will start in July and extend through October, because that will be one year after the bulk of the Army and Marine Corps forces were deployed to Viet Nam."

Wheeler said "the Army has planned programs to provide the required number of people, which will total something over 100,000."

The replacement "hump" stems from the one-year tour of duty required for U. S. servicemen sent to Viet Nam. They may stay longer, but only if they volunteer for an extension.

Sources said Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U. S. commander in Viet Nam, strongly favors retaining the one-year tour, even though a stretchout would relieve the manpower squeeze of the services in the United States and elsewhere.

ON MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's Day celebrates motherhood. It centers attention on those who gave us birth and who, in our earliest years, gave life its direction. The fact is that in the hands of the mothers of the world lie those potent influences which may make or mar life.

No other person can take the place of mother. Others may furnish a child with an education, provide a home for him, give him money and look after his physical needs; but no one except a mother can give herself with that utter abandon that we associate with motherhood. She asks nothing in return.

It is to their mothers that children look for those little things that are so dear to childish hearts and which make life so innocently happy and worthwhile. It is beside them they kneel when they are taught to say their childhood prayers. It is to them they look with confidence for advice and help. To them they go when injured in body or bruised in spirit. To them they tell their trials and troubles and difficulties--all in the knowldege that they will find in mother a sympathetic and understanding ear and a heart of love. What bruises and heartaches she has healed! What comfort she has given! What loving ministrations of a thousand kinds have been hers!

Miss Ann Jarvis of Philadelphia, who originated the idea of Mother's Day many years ago, deserves a place in the national memory for thus calling attention to the debt that children owe their mothers. As a result of her efforts, the United States Congress on May 10, 1913, passed a resolution making the second Sunday in May a national holiday "dedicated to the memory of the best mother in the world, your mother."

First recognized in the United States as a national institution, Mother's Day has since spread to other parts of the world. It is a day of remembrance. It should also be a day of rededication to the moral and spiritual principles of Christian motherhood. Lives should be ennobled by the contemplation of such principles and such ideals; it should be hallowed by the memory of those who, by lives of unselfish devotion, have given courage and inspiration for noble living.

What America needs today is more praying mothers, whomen who are spiritually minded, who recognize the key position they occupy simply by virtue of being mothers. America should hark back to the hardy virtues of the pioneers of an earlier generation. Our nation needs today not so much some economic panacea, some new system of balancing the national budget, some better controlled space missile or some new international policy; what it needs most are the inspiration and guidance to be gained from a genuinely Christian motherhood.

Mother's Day marks the annual occasion on which, as a nation, we acknowledge special respect to, and reverence for, motherhood--a motherhood characterized by those qualities which we look up to as ideals towards which we should all constantly strive.

This Mother's Day ought to inspire us, young and old alike, with a passion for doing right because it is right; with a determination to live more wholesomely and more unselfishly because we have taken time once more to recall our own mothers and those glorious virtues--purity, honor, modesty, kindliness, virtue, unselfish devotion and parental love--that we associate with ideal motherhood.

EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE

A FREEDOM OF INFORMATION BILL looks at long last to be sure of adoption at this session of Congress. The Senate passed it last October after a 10-year fight. The bill does not bear the imprint of the Johnson administration, and there has been some speculation about a veto. But one of the chief sponsors, Rep. John E. Moss (D Calif.), said on April 27 that he did not think the President would block the measure.

The statement was made as the House Government Operations Committee was approving the Senate bill, clearing it for action by the whole House. In broad terms, the measure establishes the legal principle that every citizen has the right to examine his government's records. Specifically exempted are personnel files, security matters, trade secrets, and investigative dossiers of law enforcement agencies.

The Justice Department, in addition to opposing the bill in general, has sought unsuccessfully to write into it specific affirmation of the President's right to exercise "executive privilege" in withholding information. The doctrine of executive privilege is one which Congress has never accepted. Nevertheless, it is understood that the House Government Operations Committee's final report will contain language stating the measure did not affect the principle.

ONE OF THE EARLIEST INSTANCES of Presidential refusal of a congressional request for information occurred in 1796. The House called for the instructions that had been given to Chief Justice Jay when he went to England in 1794 to negotiate the treaty bearing his name. President Washington, with the unanimous support of his Cabinet, refused to comply on the ground that disclosure would have an unfavorable effect on future foreign negotiations. Moreover, the first President found that the request was not "relative to any purpose under cognizance of the House of Representatives."

Later Presidents have been no less jealous of their prerogatives. Theodore Roosevelt sent the Senate the declaration that "The heads of departments are subject to the Constitution and laws passed by Congress. . .and to the direction of the President of the United States, and to no other direction whatever."

Conflict between Congress and the Executive over employee loyalty data begain in the F.D. Roosevelt administration and reached a fever in the Truman administration. Throughout the McCarthy investigations and MacArthur hearings Truman stood on high ground.

THE SEPARATION OF GOVERNMENTAL POWERS provided by the U.S. Constitution is the root of the doctrine of executive privilege. The relative independence of the three coordinate branches of government forecloses coercion of one by another. The only recourse of Congress is to institute impeachment proceedings. Refusal to furnish information is hardly the sort of high crime that would call for removal from office.

As early as 1803 the Supreme Court clothed persons appointed by the President with his authority, saying that when they performed duties "in conformity with his orders" then "their acts are his acts." In 1941 Atty. Gen. Jackson (later Supreme Court Justice) cited a long list of cases for the House Naval Affairs Committee and said: "The courts have repeatedly held that they will not and cannot require the Executive to produce. . .papers when in the opinion of the Executive their production is contrary to the public interest." The courts would be even less likely to honor a citizen or press demand for Executive papers.

The Democratic party has a big job ahead even for the inexhaustible President Lyndon B. Johnson.

It began Thursday night -- Texas size -- with the unveiling of the 1966 fund raising campaign. President Johnson attended a fund raising President's Club ball in Houston.

Anyone willing to part with $1,000 can join the President's club.

Membership privileges include occasional briefings by cabinet members, a presidential handshake or autographed picture and the possibility of being invited to a White House reception.

Speeches at club gatherings are brief and informal.

The technique works well.

President John F. Kennedy organized a club five years ago to help meet his 1960 campaign deficit. The club became the Democrats' chief source of financial support.

In the 1964 campaign gifts of $500 or more accounted for 69 per cent of all money entering party coffers.

The Democrats hope to raise $6 million by November--$2 million to liquidate the 1964 campaign debt, $4 million to help elect this year's candidates for state and national office.

The number of President's club functions is a closely guarded secret if it is in fact known.

But the President has his work cut out for him traveling, eating, handshaking and dancing if the party raises $6 million in six months.

Only a superman could do it and for a man occupying the awesome presidential job at the same time, the task calls for working a miracle.

NEW YORK AP -- Are you forging ahead in life's rat race?

Or are you just a treadmill mouse that has fallen behind?

Surprisingly, many people don't know for sure.

It isn't always easy to tell.

There are, however, certain symbols of status. Here are a few unmistakable signs:

Your wife raises by at least $1 the amount she daily doles out to you as lunch money.

One of the two or three television sets in your home is a color set.

Some of the officials at the bank where you keep your checking account recognize you when you enter. If your account is occasionally overdrawn, they don't make a federal case of it.

Praises of the flowering dogwood, national symbol of spring, have been sung by American poets, writers and statesmen since the early days of the republic. . .George Washington planted the snowy-white blossomed tree at Mount Vernon and it still stands today. . .His love of the dogwood is memorialized at Valley Forge, which has 50,000 trees--said to be the most magnificent display in the world. . .Thomas Jefferson also had great affection for the tree and used it in his landscaping of Monticello and the University of Virginia. . .

Such well-known literary figures as Henry David Thoreau, Christropher Morley, Jesse Stuart and A. E. Houseman have paid tribute to the flowering tree. . . .To some it is the "bride of spring." To others the "sun" of day and the "moon" of night. . . .From Jamestown Island to the Blue Ridge in Virginia, from Memphis to the Great Smokies in Tennessee and from Nashville to Roanoke Island in North Carolina, the drifts of the dogwood are heralded in the literature of the states. . . .

The dogwood has been revered since ancient times, when legends grew up explaining its unique beauties. . . .According to one tale, the dogwood's snowy blossoms date from the spring day when Pierrot, climbing a ladder to brighten the moon's face with whitewash, accidentally tripped his bucket, spattering the trees below with its contents. . . .Another legend holds that the red stains on the tip of each petal date from the memory of blood shed by a beautiful Cherokee princess who was slain by a jealous brave whose suit she had rejected. . .

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Feud Brews Between Labor and Fulbright As They Pressure Him to Probe Soviet - Latin Action.

Washington, D. C.: -- Behind the scenes a quiet but taut duel is being fought between Sen. J. William Fulbright and some mighty powerful legions of President Johnson's camp--the nation's labor leaders.

East is East and West, West. But the union chiefs want the train to meet in the hearing room of Mr. Fulbright's Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

The labor movement's top officials and their own international affairs specialists have been urging the gentleman from Arkansas to take time out of his probes of the Viet Nam conflict and hold "thoroughgoing" hearings into the Communist Tri - Continental Conference held in Havana earlier this year.

Politely, but very indeed, the Senator rejected the written request of the AFL-CIO Executive Council, labor's highest policy - making presidium.

On March 4 the Council's foreign affairs specialist, Jay Lovestone, head of the AFL-CIO's Department of International Affairs, wrote Mr. Fulbright.

The globe - trotting labor man explicitly pointed to a paragraph in the Council's resolution urging the Fulbright committee to conduct "thoroughgoing hearings on the Havana Conference with the aim of enlightening the American people about its sinister aims and to propose constructive measures for defeating the Communist threat to peace and freedom in the Western Hemisphere."

On March 17, it now can be reported, Sen. Fulbright replied to Mr. Lovestone, saying that his committee had a very tough schedule and was quite occupied with the crisis in Asia.

In his letter Mr. Fulbright disclosed that his committee had been in close contact with the Executive Branch and was able to keep up with Communist activity in Latin America.

But, he added, the Committee schedule was so tight that no new matters could be taken on.

To insiders, this meant that Mr. Fulbright had turned down AFL - CIO President George Meany himself since Mr. Lovestone would most definitely not have moved without consulting his equally determined, anti-Communist chief.

Mr. Meany rarely is deflected from any cause or direction to which he is dedicated. Neither is Mr. Fulbright. So it is a matter of the immovable and irresistible again.

What concerns the AFL -CIO is the preparation by the Tri-Continental Communist Organization to hold another conference in Cuba early in 1967.

Not only is the tri-continental network aiming at guerrilla violence in such traditional hot cold - war battlefields as Venezuela and Bolivia, but in Puerto Rico as well.

Support for such action in the U. S.' island commonweath was pledged to the Conference by the chief Soviet delegate, Sharaf Rashidov, last Jan. 6. Russia, he said, is backing "liberation movements" in Latin America, including Puerto Rico.

Amongst those who cheered were the so - called Puerto Rican delegates. They were headed by one identified as Norman Pietri, frequently quoted around the town as backing the Viet Cong.

Senor Pietri turns out to be a flamboyant speaker, running second to none in his vituperation of the U. S. Billing himself as the spokesman of the Pro-Independence Movement, he sounded, at the Havana conference, like a Lenin - era, politburo, agit - prop (agitation - propaganda) specialist.

An analysis of his major speech to the world Communist movement's tri-continental parley on Jan. 10 has just been made available.

"Comrade President, comrade delegates," says Pietri, "the Puerto Rican delegation, composed of the representatives of the Pro - Independence Movement, expresses fraternal thanks on behalf of our people."

Of course, Senor Pietri did not speak for the intensely loyal Puerto Ricans. But his small group can whip up turbulence. His speech bristled with attacks on the nine U. S. military and naval installations, the berthing of nuclear submarines, airfields, radar and training of special anti - guerrilla troops.

Pietri's long speech sounded ominous. It could be a warning of trouble to come on the prospering and peaceful island -- especially with the next Tri-Continental Organization session due in nine months.

That is why the labor people want public Senate hearings.

The East is boiling. If we don't want the West to start bubbling, now is the time to turn off the heat, say the union men. So behind the scenes they're pouring on some heat of their own -- on the gentleman from Arkansas.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Dr. Philip Lee, a two - fisted physician who has brought new life to the department of health, education, and welfare as assistant secretary, is planning to shake off the dust and ruffle the papers of various reports inside his department which cost the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars but have scarcely seen the light of day.

Particularly he is planning to reform HEW's system of giving universities grants to investigate automobile safety and then permitting the reports to be hushed up.

Last week this column reported that half a dozen or so reports on auto safety has been suppressed by Leon Goldstein, chief of Grants Research in HEW's division of accident prevention.

Dr. Lee plans to specify that when a university or any individual gets a government research grant, the contract shall set a deadline for completion of the work and that its results shall be made public.

In the past, various reports on auto safety were stalled. When researchers asked universities for the results of their work -- results which cost the taxpayers several hundred thousand dollars -- they were referred back to HEW. And When HEW was queried, the inquiries were referred back to the university.

Dr. Lee wants to end this merry-go-round.

LEGAL EAGLE

The smartest thing the Detroit motor moguls did in the auto safety hearings was to hire Lloyd Cutler as their attorney. Cutler is a close friend of Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor, who will be entrusted with enforcing the safety standards if and when congress writes them. Connor thought so highly of Cutler that he wanted to appoint him under secretary of commerce.

However, there was too much opposition, due to his representation of powerful big business clients, particularly the drug industry and the Swiss Interhandel Cartel. It was Cutler's skillful maneuvering on behalf of the drug companies, including Merck and Company, which succeeded in pulling the teeth of the Kefauver Drug Bill. Secretary Connor at that time was head of Merck and Company, one of those who retained Cutler.

Interhandel was the Swiss company which took over the assets of General Aniline and Film, the American counterpart of the Nazi Cartel I. G. Farben. The justice department in the past had branded Interhandel as a blind for the Nazis, but Cutler helped persuade Bobby Kennedy, then attorney general, to negotiate a deal which sent $100 million to the Swiss blind.

Immediately after the automobile industry retained Cutler, its image began to improve in Washington.

Working late at night over the weekend, Cutler persuaded the automobile industry to change its tactics and not oppose the administration's auto safety bill head-on. He advised an oblique attack instead. This was why the industry was credited with a "U turn" in accepting federal safety standards.

Actually this was not the case. What happened was that Cutler got the motor moguls to agree to the idea of having secretary of commerce -- at the moment John Connor, a former General Motors director -- as the man who would enforce safety standards. But Cutler turned around and proposed so many amendments against too much federal safety control that Connor, friendly as he is, will not have much authority. After all, Connor won't be in the job forever.

SAFETY-BUT WHEN?

Here are the gimmicks which Cutler proposed for the auto safety bill:

AMENDMENT NO. 1 -- Was "Delay." The automobile makers could appeal to the U.S. District Court, then to the appeals court, then to the supreme court, under Cutler's plan, if they don't like safety rulings by the secretary of commerce.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 -- Cutler proposed that the new auto safety law stretch the two - year limit for the auto industry to make design changes.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 -- Cutler has concocted a new formula for safety standards. In addition to reasonableness and practicality, he would add "cost" and whether the safety changes were "within present engineering and manufacturing art."

AMENDMENT NO. 4 -- Cutler conceived the idea of changing the proposed fine of $1,000 per vehicle, to be assessed against the motor industry for safety failure, to a total of $100,000. This is a drastic reduction, since a fine of $1,000 per vehicle could run into millions of dollars.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 -- Cutler introduced the idea of safety participation by the states. The states have a very diverse and confusing system of enforcing automobile safety, with many states having no such machinery at all. To consult the states would definitely nullify federal attempts to automobile safety.

Chief aim of the Cutler amendments is to create machinery for enforcing safety by the automobile industry, not by the U. S. government.

Note -- Secretary Connor delivered a recent speech lauding the automobile industry on safety, despite the fact that it has now called back thousands of cars to adjust defects, and despite the fact that General Motors hounded the young man who pointed to these defects, Ralph Nader, even placing a private detective on his trail.

Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson have been batting out so many important exclusive stores these days that we have had a hard time keep you up to date.

We are sure you are familiar with the series of victories they have scored through the column's revelation re Sen. Tom Dodd of Connecticut. This was climaxed on April 28 by internal revenue's announcement that it would investigate Dodd's two testimonial dinners netting $100,000, which Pearson and Anderson reported went to Dodd's private bank account.

On top of this, the Senate Ethics committee announced April 29 that it will hold public hearings on the first phase of the Dodd columns, namely Dodd's connection with a registered foreign agent, Julius Klein.

On other news fronts, Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W. Va., chairman of the House Commerce committee, announced April 26 that he was asking the department of HEW to release all the government research reports on automobile safety which Pearson that morning reported had been suppressed.

On April 27 Tom Mann resigned as deputy under secretary of state. Person had reported on April 18 that Mann was under heavy criticism from Latin American diplomats.

On April 28 the U. S. District Court followed the Pearson revelations that two D. C. painters union bosses, Robert Lowry and John T. Lyons, had criminal records, therefore must get out as head of Washington's district council 51.

On April 29 a federal court finally ratified a settlement of the Hanna mining nickel suit, thereby confirming stories unearthed by Pearson in the early days of the Eisenhower administration, 1954, reporting that the company once dominated by George M. Humphrey, then secretary of the treasury, had been given a contract to produce nickel, with fantastic profits to Hanna.

On April 25 ex-Ambassador John K. Galbraith told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that American arms assistance to India and Pakistan had caused war between the two countries. He was especially critical of arms to Pakistan. This is a point which Pearson has been reporting for the past eight years, culminating with the column on December 27, 1965, in which he gave figures on the number of Patton tanks which India had captured from Pakistan despite a Pakistani pledge to the United States that the tanks would not be used against India.

On March 20, 1966, Pearson published a private letter written by Miss Frances Knight, head of the state department's passport office, in which she enclosed a copy of a speech drafted for the Republicans for use in the 1952 campaign between Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson. In the speech she referred to Stevenson as a "glib, country club edition of Harry Truman," who used "the slickest diversionary tactics at his command to avoid the issue of Communism." Miss Knight was then working for the Truman administration.

The Pearson revelation has been the subject of widespread comment.

On February 7, 1966, the Washington merry-go-round revealed a bomb shortage in Viet Nam. This has been the subject of senate comment and a recent congressional investigation.

This is some of the news ahead of the news which Pearson and Anderson have been giving you of late.

H. L. Hunt Says

CONSTRUCTIVE, 1966, 4TH INSTALLMENT

"Constructive" is noteworthy in that it can be used either as a noun or an adjective. It can become a trademark for the sound and humanity-serving programs in the governmental, social, and economic structure of our nation. It is a word with an innate quality of orderliness and discipline. No one could ever visualize a Constructive lunatic fringe or hope to malign anyone by labeling him "super-constructive."

Patriots who have the reputation of being Conservatives, Liberals, or Constructives will find that, of the three, the title "Constructive" is best. It is a word that instantly calls to mind desirable, productive, enduring qualities.

There should be two opposing sets of principles by title, and "Constructive" and "Liberal" are ideal for meeting this need. Their two thought groups may be described as follows:

Liberal -- Those who stress privileges for the masses; holds human rights superior to property rights; stand for progress unhampered by tradition for social gains, for paternalistic government, and associated and similar objectives.

Constructive -- Those who stress freedom and individual initiative, property rights as requisite to real human rights, the incentive system, productive action, human dignity, protection from governmental monopoly and associated objectives.

A Constructive can embrace such Liberal policies as he finds acceptable. A Liberal can always be as Constructive as his progressive policies will permit. As for a "Moderate" or a "Middle-of-the-Roader," he is usually trying to be all things to all people and lacks the courage of his convictions to make a choice between Constructive and Liberal doctrines.

The pressing need is for a name that stands out as the best for describing the philosophy that calls for promoting progress, insuring freedom, national sovereignty, independence and fostering liberty and peace through strength.

Some may ask, "What's in a name?" The truthful answer can be, "The difference." HLH

On the Set With 'The King and I'

By Thedamay Cleek

I want to pay tribute to the "unsung heroes" of "The King and I." These are the persons who are very much in the play but who are not seen by the audience and will not receive "curtain calls."

Without their help, a play could not go on. The ones who work out the lighting effects, David Entrekin, (Chairman), Carroll Couch, Carolyn Hill, Terry Johnson, and Danny Cannon, are invaluable to us.

Then there is the prop crew, Abbie Morrison (Chairman), Ruth and Lyman Dale, Mary Wilkinson, Mary Fussell and Martha Edwards. These are the people who scour the town for items that range all the way from a rug on the floor to a pair of genuine Victorian glasses, loaned by the American Optical Co.

A cast would be very nervous if they knew they had to go on without someone in the wings to prompt them. They are grateful to the prompters; Anna Schumacher, Sandy York, and Linda Pickard.

With a production such as "The Kind and I", with so many groups placed in various parts of the building, it is necessary to have "Cue girls." Zelpha Davis, Dona Wheeler, and Susan Simpson are equipped with walkie-talkies to keep the performers informed of their entrances. They also keep stage crews informed of set changes. They are in contact with the lighting director and the sound man.

Sound, in the charge of Lynn Colley, involves taping and coordinating the various sounds that are needed for backgrounds and special effects. He must always be sure that these sounds are synchronized with the action on stage.

Many people are used backstage to move the sets, clear the stage, re-arrange it and even make repairs on flats and screens if something is damaged during the action. The stage crew includes Harley Barnes, Bernard Kincy, John "Red" Davis, W. W. Wilkinson, Richard Fussell, F. X. Schumacher III, and Ernest Eledge. Many members of the cast also assist, back-stage.

There will be people in the dressing rooms, helping with costume changes, repairing make - up, lining up costumes for the dressers and keeping things in order. One of the best in this department, in the past has been Phyllis Watkins and we will be glad when she can help again.

Anne Rowe, Sikeston Little Theatre board chairman of publicity, has been lending her artistic talent to the creating of some of the exotic props used in the play. Therefore, the job of covering the story of this production has been given me. I'm sure I have not given credit to many people who have lent their time and effort to making "The King and I" a success. These are indeed "unsung" and if I have been remiss, I know they will understand.

I have misspelled names, cast people to the wrong roles, described costumes for the wrong person now and then but all I have told you about will be there and much, much more. I want to thank all the committee members for helping me collect the information needed to write these reports on the progress of this tremendous undertaking by our director, Hope Terrell.

Last but not least in importance is the curtain puller. There was a time when we knew the curtain puller would be "Dr. Tom." Since then, we have taken turnabout at this important task. After all -- this is the man whose action begins and ends the show. And he would like to open to S.R.O. on May 6-7 - 14 at 8 p.m. and May 8 at 2 p.m. at the Junior high school auditorium.

Matthews Club Meets April 28

A pink and white color scheme was used in decorations on the refreshment table which was covered with a pink and white cloth and centered with fresh flower arrangement.

A delicious dessert course was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Burch, Mrs. Ralph Fairies, and Mrs. Frank Stanley.

After six long weeks of hard field duty at an isolated Army training area, our unit returned to home base (at Fort Hood, Texas) across the street from a WAC detachment.

"Trouble?" said the WAC. "I doubt it. My girls have it up here!" she explained, tapping her temple.

"Ma'am," said the captain, "I don't care where they have it--my men will find it. Restrict 'em!"

Dogs Streak Past Jackson 9-1

Behind the four-hit pitching of staff ace, Dar Kern, the mighty Sikeston Bulldogs swept past visiting Jackson here yesterday afternoon 9-1, for their sixth win in seven starts.

Kern, the Bulldogs fireball specialist was never in any serious trouble as he was backed up by some fine hitting and four runs in the first inning.

The game started out with Bill Lewis, of Jackson bouncing one past second base for a hit and was followed by Ron Myer who sacrificed to center field moving Lewis to second and bringing up Keith Dunn who struck out and Lewis was caught at third base trying to steal for the last out of the inning.

The Bulldogs caught fire in the first inning, pushing across four runs on three hits with the leadoff batter Richard Montgomery reaching first base on balls, Limbaugh followed with a single, Garner walked loading the bases, Mankley struck out and Couch singled driving in a run and was followed by Ramsey who doubled driving in three runs and was out trying to take third on the play. Bailey ended the inning grounding out to the short stop.

Kern had an easy go of it the rest of the game as the ace hurler had three up and three down in the second, and had to pitch to only five extra batters the rest of the game.

The Bulldogs continued their domination of the game in the second inning as they collected three runs on four hits. Ellison, Kern, Limbaugh, and Manley collected the hits for the Dogs as they slacked off the rest of the game and collected only two hits and two runs.

The Jackson Indians collected their only run in the seventh inning with Ron Ashman starting off the inning with a single. Dane Crader reached first base on an error by the left fielder, and was followed by Randy Speck who grounded into a double play, moving Ashman to third and Tom Hinklebine lined a single scoring Ashman for the Indians only run. Bill Lewis ended the game flying out to center field.

Mays Ends 10 Day Search For 512th

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie Mays broke Mel Ott's National League Home run record by hitting No. 512 Wednesday night.

Ending a 10-day search for the record-breaker, Mays found the range in the fifth inning and surpassed Ott by tagging a pitch from Claude Osteen over the right field fence for his seventh homer of the season and 512th of his career.

Oddly, it was the first homer of the season by Mays that did not tie or win a game for the San Francisco Giants, who held a 4-1 lead en route to a 6-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers when the $125,000-a-year center fielder brought the crowd to its feet.

Although it didn't count as far as winning the game, it got Mays a two-minute standing ovation from the Candlestick Park crowd of 28,220, it ended a seven-game drought in which Mays hadn't driven in a run and it ended a string of 96 innings in which Osteen had not allowed a homer.

Mays, however, will have nothing to show for it, except a line in the record book. He got his cake, but didn't eat it. And he got his ball, but couldn't keep it.

The ball was retrieved by Henry Garron Jr., 17, of Oakland, Calif., but his father didn't want to part with it.

"I was offered $100 and I think it was worth more," Garron said.

But he still asked Mays to autograph it, and Mays did, remarking:

"Be my guest and keep it."

Mays gave scant notice to the cake supplied for the occasion, a yellow cake with "512" written on in white frosting. He didn't spot it until after he had showered, and it went untouched.

"That thing must have been here a week," Mays quipped.

Mays probably will pass two more goals this season. He figures to climb above both Ted Williams, who hit 521 homers, and Jimmy Foxx, who hit 534, before the season ends.

That would leave only one more target -- Babe Ruth and his 714 homers.

While Mays provided the hitting excitement, Jack Hamilton of the New York Mets provided the pitching excitement by allowing only one hit in an 8-0 victory at St. Louis--a bunt single by opposing pitcher Ray Sadecki in the third inning.

Elsewhere, Chris Short pitched a two-hitter in Philadelphia's 2-1 victory over Atlanta, Houston's Robin Roberts shut out the Chicago Cubs 4-0 on seven hits and Pittsburgh edged Cincinnati 4-3.

Even though Mays stole the show at Candlestick, Joe Gibbon made an impressive first start for the Giants by setting the Dodgers down on four hits.

Osteen was in trouble before Mays tagged his homer, helping San Francisco to three unearned runs in a four-run second inning. He hit Jim Hart, allowed a single by Orlando Cepeda and then threw away Jesus Alou's bouncer for one run. Hal Lanier singled home another and Jim Davenport followed with a two-run single.

Hamilton, bringing his record to 3-1, surrendered his only hit when Sadecki laid a two-out bunt down the third base line and beat Ken Boyer's throw to first. The 26-year-old right-hander, purchased from Detroit during the off-season, struck out six, walked only one and allowed only two balls hit out of the infield.

Ron Swoboda and Ed Bressoud gave Hamilton all the support he needed by slamming homers.

Short was touched for both hits by Denis Menke, who singled to center in the fifth inning and hit a homer in the eighth. The Phillie southpaw struck out five and walked two in bringing his record to 3-1.

Tony Gonzalez provided the first Phillie run with a homer in the second inning off Ken Johnson and the other came across on consecutive fourth inning singles by Dick Groat, Bill White and John Callison.

Roberts, winning his second in a row after three losses, brought the Astros their fourth straight victory. Joe Morgan singled in the first run and Dave Nicholson took care of the other three with a homer off Dick Ellsworth.

Bob Bailey homered for the Pirates first run in the third inning before they pushed across three unearned fourth inning runs with the aid of two errors by Reds' third baseman Pete Rose.

Two Homers By Scott Lifts Red Sox To Win

By HAL BROCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

"Great Scott," exclaimed Manager Billy Herman when he saw the rookie infielder sporting an ascot on a spring training trip.

So George Scott discarded the neckwear, but not the nickname.

Scott, Boston's dapper young first baseman, took over the American League home run lead Wednesday night with his sixth and seventh of the season as the as the Red Sox blanked Detroit 7-0 on Earl Wilson's two-hitter.

It was just that kind of slugging that earned Scott a starting job during spring training.

Scott drove in five runs with his two homers as the Red Sox won their fifth game and third against Detroit this season.

Elsewhere, Fred Whitfield's ninth inning homer gave Cleveland a 2-1 decision over New York in a game in which Indians' shortstop Larry Brown suffered a fractured skull when he collided with teammate Leon Wagner going after a fly ball.

Washington whipped Baltimore 3-2, Minnesota rocked Chicago 6-1 and California ripped Kansas City 13-2 in other games.

Scott's first homer followed one by Wilson in the fifth inning.

In the ninth, Scott hammered his second homer of the night, just missing the left field roof with a long drive.

Whitfield, the Yankees' No. 1 nemesis, beat New York with a homer for the third time this season. The veteran first baseman, who played under New York Manager Johnny Keane when Keane managed the St. Louis Cardinals, has punished Yankee pitching for 13 homers in the last two seasons.

Brown and Wagner collided in the fourth inning chasing Roger Maris' blooper. Brown was reported in serious condition at Lenox Hill Hospital where examination revealed a fractured skull, fractured nose and fractured cheekbone.

Wagner suffered a broken nose.

The Senators, who ended Baltimore's 10-game winning streak Tuesday, beat the Orioles again with three pitchers combining for a five hitter.

Relievers Dick Lines and Ron Kline permitted just three hits over the last 5 2/3 innings after starter Jim Duckworth was forced to leave the game with a back injury in the fourth inning.

Minnesota scored three runs on one hit in the first inning and went on to beat Chicago as Jim Kaat scattered nine White Sox hits.

Don Mincher's double following an error and a walk produced two runs and then Don Buford's throwing error brought Mincher home with the third run for the Twins.

Bob Rodgers whacked four hits and Norm Siebern and Jack Warner drove in two runs apiece as the Angels racked Kansas City, Dean Chance pitched a six-hitter and the Angels battered three Athletic pitchers for 17 hits.

Cleveland Player Injured In Game

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK AP -- Larry Brown, Cleveland's shortstop, was under intensive care in Lenox Hill Hospital today after suffering a fractured skull, fractured nose and fractured right cheek bone in a collision with teammate Leon Wagner at Yankee Stadium.

Wagner also is hospitalized with a broken nose and facial bruises.

It was the second bitter blow to the Brown family within a period of three months. Dick Brown, Larry's older brother and a catcher with Baltimore, underwent surgery for removal of a brain tumor two months ago.

Roger Maris lifted a high fly ball down the line in left field in the fourth inning of the Indians' 2-1 victory. Brown tore back after the ball and Wagner charged in from left on collision course. The 160-pound Brown and the 200-pound outfielder met head on. Both sprawled on the ground as the ball fell safely for a double.

It is feared Brown might be lost for months and possibly the rest of the season. Wagner is due back in a day or two.

They carried the 26-year-old Brown off the field on a stretcher after trainer Wally Bockpried open his mouth to keep him from choking on his blood. Wagner walked off under his own power but accompanied Brown to the hospital for an overnight stay and X rays. Both had been knocked out on the field.

"It was one of those plays nobody could call," said a dazed Wagner in the clubhouse as he mopped blood from a cut on the bridge of his nose. "I saw Brown. It didn't look like he could catch it so I put on a burst of speed. When the ball went up I knew it had to be caught. It was one of those split second plays that you can't call a man off on.

North Pemiscot To Visit Bulldogs

Sikeston's mighty Bulldogs will meet the North Pemiscot Mustangs this afternoon in the first round game of the state high school baseball tournament at VFW park.

The winner of this contest will meet the winner of the Doniphan district at Campbell later this month.

North Pemiscot, currently on a six game winning streak, has lost only 2 games this year. The Dogs sport a 7-1 win-loss record. The Dogs' pitching staff sports one no-hitter and a one-hitter in their victory column.

The Mustangs won over Parma, Hayti and Campbell to advance into the game with the Dogs and have been guided by fine pitching by two ace right handers.

In an attempt to tame the wild Mustangs, the Bulldogs will place a hard throwing right hander against them, Gary Stallings, who has been credited with a one hitter in the district tourney, and the win was against the rough Bloomfield Wildcats. Rudy Manley showed fine relief pitching Monday as he was tapped for only one hit in six innings and will back up the ace hurler Stallings.

Leading the Mustangs hitting attack will be two fine sluggers who have combined for a total of 22 hits in leading their team to the first round game of the state gournament.

The Bulldogs will have the edge with the power as the Mustangs are not known for their hitting but are known for their fine defensive play and capitalize on opponents mistakes.

Nader Ticking No One Knows Why Though

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON AP -- Ralph Nader, one of the greatest pains in the neck the automobile industry ever encountered, has put in years analyzing the problem of safety in American cars but not much time analyzing himself.

As few ever have, this tall, gangling, unmarried, 32-year-old lawyer has helped light a fire under Congress and the automakers with his criticism of the latter and his crusade for safer cars.

He has done it with his book, "Unsafe At Any Speed," which hasn't made him a fortune, and his statements before Congress and groups anxious to hear his attacks.

This year Congress may pass a law laying down federal safety standards and requirements such as have never been imposed on the industry. The automakers finally thought this might be worthwhile although a few weeks before they didn't.

Nader is not only not a mechanic, he doesn't own a car. He has gathered his information from various sources, like studies and engineering reports. He often goes sleepless to do research and prepare his next day's statements.

The night before last, getting ready to appear before a congressional committee Wednesday he didn't sleep at all. And when he arrived he had such a bundle of material he needed both arms to carry it.

Nader, a graduate of Princeton and Harvard Law School, gave up a law practice to devote himself full time to this cause. Why? What makes him tick? What's the motivation behind this use of his life for this crusade?

Ask him, and he's a little blank. He relishes the question. He grins and rubs his head and makes a hasty expedition back through his life to childhood in search of the answer. He can't be sure. He can only guess.

And his guess is vague. He thinks his parents, Lebanese with a restaurant in Winsted, Conn., were an influence but he can't say how. He knows he always felt people should do good for one another.

He called it public service. It didn't involve making money. For some reason, trying to explain, he thought of the dignity of man and the time he was four years old in the Eastern Orthodox Church his family attended.

He was in line with a lot of other boys, waiting to go up and kiss the bishop's hand, and he didn't want to because he thought it was an indignity to him. Beyond that he seemed at a loss for his motivation about safe cars.

Except for this: He said "I have been interested in auto safety ever since my school days when I saw too much blood on the highway." The auto industry's reaction to him hasn't been exactly warm.

Henry Ford II, head of the Ford Motor Co., said that if Nader was a good engineer he could have a job at Ford but "Frankly, I don't think he knows very much about automobiles."

And General Motors had private detectives investigate his life. Nader testified that after his book was published gumshoes followed him, quizzed his friends and old college acquaintances about his sex life, asking whether he was anti-Semitic and if he belonged to any left-wing groups. They found nothing against him.

And on an extraordinary day, James M. Roche, president of General Motors, apologized before a Senate committee for the sleuthing, explaining it was to find out if Nader had any connection with damage claims against GM.

Nader had traveled a lot overseas, writing about problems he saw, and then came home to concentrate on automobiles, believing, he said, he couldn't solve foreign problems but might help solve some at home.

He has other projects in mind when this is finished but won't disclose them. One friend said of him:

"The good thing about what he is doing is that it shows the individual counts and can get things done. The old saying about individual effort--'you can't fight city hall' -- didn't count in his case."

Business Looking Good, Worries Brokers

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK AP -- Business is looking so good that Wall Street is worried. Stock traders are edgy lest business is looking too good. But many businessmen are inclined to think the stock market is flunking as a barometer.

Stock traders' fears are two-sided. First, the unexpected size of the economy's advance in the first three months of the year may have fired business and consumer confidence to the overheating stage. Or second, the big spurt in prices and profits may beef up labor's demands and also encourage taxes in an election year.

Businessmen and bankers are cautioning that it's too early yet to be sure of either of these outcomes. They note that the business spurt this year is far from universal and the pace is irregular. They point to some weaknesses, or at least slowdowns, that are beginning to appear.

These prophets of caution cite a slackening of late in the rate of new orders in the steel industry and the 5 per cent lag in new car sales this April from a year ago. Housing starts for the year are well below previous rates. And leading corporations have announced cuts in their spending plans this year for expansion and modernization.

The nation's purchasing agents have told their association they see this quarter as hitting the peak pace for 1966--with leveling off starting at midyear.

Early this week, however, stock traders were concentrating more on the threats of government intervention to cool down a boom that had grown hotter than expected. And most of the news reports added to their nervousness.

Further expansion of the economy, at least through the current quarter, is all but taken for granted.

Three Networks Have News Duplication

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK AP -- CBS' news division under its president Richard S. Salant, wants to do something constructive about the fierce three-network competition that sometimes duplicates coverage of the same stories.

Salant spoke Wednesday to a conference of representatives of the network's affiliated stations.

He recalled his "serious reservations" about the opening to closing coverage of political conventions by all three networks two years ago, including what he called "all the trivia and fill--the endless nominations of favorite sons and seconding speeches, the unspontaneous spontaneous demonstrations and so on and so on ad nauseum."

He said Wednesday that it is time to reconsider this coverage in terms of "journalistic function" -- edited reports of meaningful events--instead of sheer quantity and hours of focusing on the story as it occurs.

He proposes now to apply editorial judgment to coverage of the May 17 flight of Gemini 9. Barring emergencies, CBS will reduce sharply the amount of network time given to the flight, but will break in for short periods to cover important events--the launching, docking in space, an astronaut's walk in space. And then it will cover the return of the capsule.

"Man's ascent into space is no longer unprecedented nor is each mission so extraordinary," he said. A space journey, he said, once the rocket is in orbit is a second hand story passed along by the space agency which can be seen neither by television reporters nor caught by the cameras.

It is perhaps inevitable that some network would ultimately move in this direction. It has been slow in coming largely--again in Salant's words--"for competitive reasons, or for public relations reasons or to polish up our image, whatever that means."

The largest educational machine in the world is in Berlin. It is 27 miles long. It is strung with barbed wire. It teaches lessons in the meaning of democracy and communism, of freedom and tyranny, of humanity and inhumanity. Its name is The Wall.

OUTDOOR DRINKING FOUNTAIN KEEPS YOUNGSTERS OUT OF THE KITCHEN

Before you know it, summer will be here. Then the endless patter of little feet treking into the kitchen for a drink of water begins.

Children always promise not to track in dirt or wake up baby by banging the door, but somehow they forget. Besides, their little friends need drinks of water too, and whoever heard of a group of children all remembering to wipe their feet or close the door quietly?

What's the answer? For a growing number of young families, it's an outdoor drinking fountain, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. Many families who enjoy outdoor living--and this includes those who have no youngsters -- have water conveniences installed on the patio. They consist of a fountain, hot and cold water and an entertainment sink, with storage space beneath for charcoal and other barbecue equipment.

Outdoor water makes food preparation easier, and it simplifies the clean-up job after a meal. The cost of the installation is less than you might think, the Bureau says. A plumbing contractor will be glad to give you an estimate.

THIS EMPTY house belonging to J. W. Wooten, Luther Street, was destroyed by fire shortly before noon Tuesday in an unusual way. He was in the process of tearing down the house, and had burned two tree stumps in front of the home. While dismantling the front porch, it fell to the ground and caught fire. Firemen Leonard Overby and Odis Parks are shown putting out the final blaze on the north side.

From a new book "The District of Columbia From Its Glorious Past to the Present," by Allan Carpenter, published by Children's Press, I glean these toothsome fragments:

The White House light bill is going down despite President Johnson's concern over turning out electric lights.

Compared to what lights used to cost at the White House, today's light bill is a pittance. Before a central lighting system was installed in the nation's capital, an evening's entertainment by the President in one White House room -- the East Room -- required $100 worth of candles. And the White House has 132 rooms.

Washington shoppers today would be startled beyond measure to see President Johnson in a supermarket. But, in simpler days, shoppers thought nothing of meeting President William Henry Harrison with a basket doing the White House marketing.

The National Zoological Park is one of the finest zoos anywhere. It has Mohini-- the only white tiger on the public display in the world.

Beneath the Capital rotunda is a crypt and under this a tomb, intended to be the last resting place of George Washington. Because the family would not permit his body to be moved from Mt. Vernon, the tomb has never been used, except to hold the simple black funeral bier on which caskets have rested in state in the rotunda.

Bean soup has been on the House of Representatives menu since 1904 when Speaker Joe Cannon, decreed, "From now on -- hot or cold, rain, snow, or shine -- I want it on the menu every day." It has been on the Senate menu by decision of the Rules Committee every day since 1907.

The Federal Government in Washington today is almost 2,000 times as large as when it moved from Philadelphia in the summer of 1800. There were only 130 clerks in the entire Government force then.

One hundred years ago there were 7,000 Government employes in Washington. Today, there are close to 250,000-- more than 35 times as many as under President Lincoln. One third of all people now employed in the Washingtor area work for the Government.

"The Agriculture Building has the most unusual history of all Government buildings" writes Mr. Carpenter. "Longtime Agriculture Secretary James 'Tama Jim' Wilson knew that the money appropriated by Congress for the new building was not enough. Instead of complaining, he had plans made for a much larger building, and had the two wings of this building constructed leaving a gaping hole in the middle.

"Wilson was one of the most able dealers with Congress in the country's history. When Congress inquired about the unsightly hole in the ground, Wilson calmly replied in his Scotch brogue, 'Ye kenna let it stand like that; 'twod be a national disgrace.' The needed money was appropriated and the rest of the building built."

The nine - million-ton Capitol dome rotates three to four inches every day. As the sun's warmth moves around the dome, it causes it to expand and rotate -- first south, then southwest, and west. And, as the retiring sun declines and disappears, it moves north, northeast, and east - finally returning to its original position.

Commercial Appeal

FUTURE

When we use the word FUTURE, do we imply more than the tomorrows of the present life? I think we must if we expect ever to find any explanation for present imperfections, inequalities and apparent inconsistencies.

It would be difficult to reconcile oneself to the injustices we think we see in ths world if we could not anticipate the coming of a time when we will see things in proper focus.

Food Supplies Increase For Mothers' Day

By SALLY RYAN

NEW YORK AP -- It looks like a bright Mothers' Day weekend in the nation's food stores.

Supplies of many fresh vegetables and fruits have increased.

Best of all, beef, pork and egg prices are creeping down.

Prices of sliced bacon, cured hams and fresh pork butts are down as much as 4 cents a pound on the West Coast, and choice grade steer rounds, loins, ribs and chucks are headed down.

Eggs are down 1 to 10 cents a dozen. They may drop further the next month or so, but they are likely to go up later this summer.

Poultry prices have been higher than a year ago -- about 4 cents a pound for fryers. Many stores already are featuring specials on turkeys.

Fair weather in the Corn Belt cut the number of pigs moving to market this week, raising packers' prices. Pork supplies are down 2 to 4 per cent from last spring, but much better than they were last winter. Retail prices may edge up this summer, but barring an unexpected spurt in demand--such as an escalation of the war in Viet Nam--they are not likely to be as high as they were in January.

Potatoes, which were comparatively expensive last summer, should be much cheaper. Sweet corn, celery, carrots, cabbage artichokes, cucumbers, greens, lettuce, onions, squash, sweet potatoes and tomatoes are moving to market in increased numbers.

France To Check Air Flights Monthly

PARIS AP -- France has informed its major NATO partners that as of June 1 authorization for allied military aircraft to fly over the land in France will be subject to monthly review, well informed sources reported today. Previously the permission has been on an annual basis.

The new restriction would permit the French to cut off overflight and landing privileges on 30-days' notice, the sources said. There was no indication that this would be done.

The French move, made Tuesday, was the latest in President Charles de Gaulle's overall plan to evict allied forces from French territory by next April 1.

The new French decision is aimed primarily at the United States, which has about 100,000 separate flights of planes and helicopters over France annually. But other NATO nations, such as West Germany, Britain and Canada, also would be affected.

The Church of the Transfiguration, more popularly known as the Little Church Around the Corner, was built in 1848.

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

A Review of the 1964 Term

VIII. COMMUNISTS

Communists in the Supreme Court have had both their ups and their downs in recent years. During the 1964 term, the domestic Communists fared decidedly better than the foreign ones. In United States v. Brown, another bare 5-to-4 majority held unconstitutional a Federal statute that barred Communists from serving as union officers or employees, thereby overruling a 1950 Supreme Court case. The majority struck down the statute as a "bill of attainder," or a legislative punishment of Communists without trial.

Four dissenters, Justices White, Clark, Harlan and Stewart, held that the statute was not designed to punish Communists but to keep them out of key union positions where they could forment political or revolutionary strikes. It is a propensity that extends even to North America. Indeed, the Supreme Court of British Columbia has declared:

"It is quite possible that a Communist could appear superficially to be a good business agent for a union. His allegiance to communism, his belief that capitalism must be destroyed, would certainly not lead him to ameliorate his demands on capitalist employers. They might, indeed, induce him to exaggerate those demands to the breaking point in the hope of destroying, in the person of the employing corporation, a unit of capitalist society. His underlying beliefs must, for the reasons I have stated, make him ultimately inimical to free trade unions which flourish most luxuriantly in the atmosphere of capitalism."

The Court's answer to all of this is an extended historical analysis designed to prove that because some bills of attainder have had preventive as well as retributive functions, a statute that singles out a group with known revolutionary doctrine and keeps them out of sensitive positions provides for punishing them without trial. Of course, any country that has permitted Communists to obtain sensitive positions has soon found that such liberty is eagerly seized upon to foment a revolution, after which there is no further occasion for a trial because the revolution is an accomplished fact. In short, it is not generally possible to prove in the Anglo-American tradition that a Communist is a revolutionary until it is too late. One would have thought that facts so well known to all that judicial notice may be taken of them would provide an adequate substitute for formal proof in cases involving Communists as in other cases. Ignorance may be bliss, but a Communist take-over is not.

If reports reaching the marble palace in Washington about domestic Communists are scanty, at least a better flow of information is in evidence regarding foreign Communists. Speaking through Chief Justice Warren, the Court held that Congress could constitutionally limit foreign travel by Americans, and had delegated such power to the President and Secretary of State by giving them control over passports. The Chief Justice therefore upheld a State Department ban on travel to Cuba by an American "to satisfy my curiosity about the state of affiars in Cuba and to make me a better informed citizen."

The Chief Justice held:

"It is moreover, the judgment of the State Department that a major goal of the Castro regime is to export its Communist revolution to the rest of Latin America. The United States and other members of the Organization of American States have determined that travel between Cuba and the other countries of the Western Hemisphere is an important element in the spreading of subversion, and many have therefore undertaken measures to discourage such travel. It also cannot be forgotten that in the early days of the Castro regime, United States citizens were arrested and imprisoned without charges. We think, particularly in view of the President's statutory obligation to "use such means, not amounting to acts of war, as he may think necessary and proper" to secure the release of an American citizen unjustly deprived of his liberty by a foreign government, that the Secretary has justifiably concluded that travel to Cuba by American citizens might involve the nation in dangerous international incidents, and that the Constitution does not require him to validate passports for such travel."

DAEOC Grant Applied for

Lloyd Phillips, Assistant Director in charge of Program Development of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation, announced that DAEOC has submitted to the Kansas City Regional Office, a project totaling $1,137,573 of which $899,562 will be financed by Federal funds and $239,011 will be financed locally.

The project has a total of eight components, the largest being the Neighborhood Service Centers, for a 12 month duration. The idea of this particular Component is to involve the target area people or to involve the people that will receive the services.

Plans are to have 33 of these centers throughout the six county area.

Bill Graves, Assistant Director in charge of Project Administration, states the Medicare Component is almost finished. Approximately 4,000 Senior Citizens were signed through Social Security in Cape Girardeau from this area because of the great interest created through the Medicare Alert Program of OEO.

Mr. Earl Williams, Area Director, stated this project for the Neighborhood Service Centers, is the second of two large request since the area office has been formed. The other project was a Headstart Program for 19 schools in the area. The amount of the Headstart program was $428,853 of which $365,248 to be financed through the OEO and $63,405 provided locally.

Williams also said if these programs are all approved, this area will be directing 55 projects amounting to aproximately 2-1/2 million dollars. The 1965-66 funding year ended April 30, 1966.

Catch-All Bill Has Rough Time

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Reports from inside the House-Senate conference committee yesterday indicated rough sledding in the effort to get an acceptable compromise on the final catch-all appropriation bill.

The formal request for a conference came yesterday in the House but the conferees have been meeting informally since Tuesday night.

The House appropriations chairman, Rep. Bernard Simcoe, D-Callaway County, said the situation "looks rather rough. We met last night and this morning but haven't accomplished a thing."

The House recessed until 4 p.m. to give the conference committee more time to work out a solution.

House conferees got the majority floor leader, Rep. Mel Carnahan, D-Phelps County, to hold up a Senate-passed resolution calling for final adjournment at midnight last night.

They said passage of the resolution by the House would give the Senate conferees an upper hand on the appropriation bill.

The House did send to the governor a bill transferring a total of $134,792,062 in general revenue money for state aid to public schools.

Dog-Lover Keeps Pet Alive

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia AP--For six days a puppy, trapped in an animal snare, was kept alive by a crow.

Both animals belong to a couple living at a temporary road construction camp.

Recently the puppy disappeared. The couple searched in the tick brush surrounding the camp but no trace of it could be found.

Then they noticed that their pet crow, brought to them by a servant, did not seem to be eating normally.

The crow would take a bit of food in its beak, fly off and return a short while later to fetch another scrap of food. The crow, which normally ate his food straight out of the dish, would then repeat the performance.

The couple followed the crow when it flew off again with a prize piece of meat. Keeping just ahead of the couple, the crow led them to the spot where the dog lay trapped.

The dog, they found, was in almost perfect health.

Dr. William MacNae, zoologist at Johannesburg's Witwatersrand University commented: "This is further proof that birds especially crows, can become animal lovers themselves."

A zoo official said crows had a tendency to form unusual friendships and when put to the test were usually courageous and faithful allies.

Armed Forces

Jerry E. Eaton

CAMP PENDLETON, CALIF. (FHTNC) -- Marine Private Jerry E. Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Eaton of 407 Thrower St., Dexter, Mo., has completed individual combat training here.

The four-week course included over 200 hours of instruction under simulated combat conditions, covering squad tactics, guerrilla warfare, day and night combat, patrolling and the use of infantry weapons.

His next stop is four weeks of basic specialist training in his military occupational field. Marines to be assigned to infantry units will be taught infantry subspecialties, such as the machine gun, grenade launcher, rifle or mortar. Marines to be assigned to highly technical specialties will be sent to military technical schools for their specilaist training.

Leathernecks bound for the Pacific will receive more training when they report to the Staging Battalion at Camp Pendleton, Calif. This training will emphasize jungle warfare, patrolling, and civic action based on experience gained in Vietnam.

Self-Respect cannot be hunted. It cannot be purchased. It is never for sale. It cannot be fabricated out of public relations. It comes to us when we are alone, in quiet moments, in quiet places, when we suddenly realize that, knowing the good, we have done it; knowing the beautiful, we have served it; knowing the truth, we have spoken it.

Space Age Bargain

By RONALD THOMPSON

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON, Tex. AP -- A "space age" classified ad you'll probably never see:

For Sale -- 1965 model, two-place space capsule, like new, bucket seats, one owner who drove it only to orbit and back, five million actual miles. Make offer.

Used spacecraft aren't on the market yet. Anyhow, not everyone needs a space flying machine -- at least for the foreseeable future.

And, who could afford one?

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration doesn't put a price tag on its spaceships but, generally speaking, the two-man Gemini vehicles cost about $25 million each, and the one-man Mercury capsules, about $7.5 million.

NASA has a growing stockpile of once-flown spaceships. The space agency has launched 16 manned and unmanned capsules in its Mercury and Gemini programs.

Though structurally sound, officials choose not to fly them again. This doesn't mean the historically valuable items set in some hangar gathering dust.

Most of the vehicles have found their final resting places in museums or display rooms. Some are taken on frequent tours in the United States and abroad.

"These are historic items," said Bob Gordon, director of Nasa's educational programs office at the Manned Spacecraft Center. "I don't think the government would ever want to sell them."

NASA, in the terms of one official, "gave" its unmanned Gemini 2 capsule to the Air Force for use in its manned orbiting laboratory project. The manufacturer is charging $11 million to overhaul it.

Officials advance several reasons for not wanting to rocket a man into space aboard a second-hand capsule. In the long run, they say, it is cheaper to build one. Some of the drawbacks:

Each vehicle is tailored for a specific mission. Some instruments and experimental equipment fitted into one are not on another. Seats are custom built for an individual astronaut's size and shape.

THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MISSOURI

RESOLUTION

A resolution declaring the necessity for the construction of 1½" hotmix asphaltic pavement on 6" soil cement base with concrete curb and gutter on the west side only of Dona Street from Malone to Matthews in accordance with plans and specifications in the City of Sikeston, Missouri; stating the nature of the improvement; the estimated cost and providing that payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills levied and assessed against the abutting property. Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Sikeston, State of Missouri, as follows: SECTION 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said Street necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston. SECTION 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement. SECTION 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $3.75 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement. SECTION 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the statutes of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement. SECTION 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri. SECTION 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that it shall be published for seven consecutive insertions. Read the first, second and third times and passed and approved this 2nd day of May, 1966. Approved: Kendall Sikes, Mayor; Attest: John W. Vaughn, City Clerk. 187 inc 193

Reading, 'Riting, and 'Rithmetic may be kid stuff... but the fourth "R" ... Responsibility ... is man stuff!

A newspaperboy learns the meaning of responsibility from the very first day he shoulders a newspaper bag.

Now he is in business for himself—buying at wholesale and selling at retail—responsible for his own delivering, collecting, and selling.

Assisted by men who know how to work with boys... and an occasional "pat-on-the-back" from his family... this Junior Independent Merchant develops the self-discipline which prompt delivery requires—learns how to get along with people in all walks of life—appreciates the value of money—and assumes the responsibility for a growing business.

He's learning by doing... and he's doing fine!

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Our son is three years old and I am worried about him. When Kurt was born his father made it plain that he was going to raise his son to be a man and not a pansy. My husband feels that boys should not be cuddled or kissed or shown any affection. When Kurt falls down and cries my husband ignores him and makes me do the same. Even when the child is sick I am not permitted to rock him.

Last week Kurt had a cold but his father insisted that I give him a cold bath as usual and not pamper him. He got a chill and his cold very nearly developed into pneumonia.

I believe in discipline but I think my husband is carrying things too far. Kurt stutters when he speaks to his father and I am sure he is terrified of him. My husband reads your column and agrees with some of the things you say. It would help a great deal if you published my letter and gave us your opinion.-- KURT'S MOTHER

Dear Mother: Ask your doctor to talk to your husband at once. If something isn't done to change your husband's thinking, you are going to have a seriously disturbed boy on your hands.

Every child needs affection. Cuddling and gentleness does not make boys queer. Harshness, rigidity and an absence of father love can drive male children to identify with their mothers -- and THIS can cause homosexuality.

Dear Ann Landers: Since that letter from your daughter Margo appeared, (she disagreed with your stand on sitters) I'll bet you've had all the sitter letters, pro and con, that you care to see for the next 100 years. I do hope you will print one more, however.

My girl friend Gloria and I both sit for women in the neighborhood. Gloria grew up here and she knows more people than I do. On two occasions last winter Gloria called me and asked if I wanted to sit for a couple of women who were in a spot. They had called her but she was booked. I was free and said, "Yes, thanks a lot."

Well, both women liked me and I got along with their children better than anyone they had ever hired. They called me back regularly after that. Now Gloria is mad because she says I "stole her jobs." Do you feel I should have turned the ladies down? -- SHORT ONE FRIEND

Dear Short: Well -- here we go again? I do NOT feel that you should have turned the ladies down, but it would have been a good idea to suggest that they call Gloria and give her first call on the subsequent jobs. Having done that you would have discharged your responsibility to Gloria.

To the Editor:

Dear Charlie:

I'd like to add a note too, expressing my "appreciation and thanks to your paper, The Sikeston Standard, for having a part in bringing the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra to our town. Yes, as Keith Collins wrote, "it was a shame more people didn't turn out and take advantage of this great event in Sikeston, as it was quite a "Nite of Music." I'll go a little further than others that wrote and say too, "It's just a shame that our town doesn't have a nice Civic Center building or Community Center that would seat 800 - 900 people with a big stage, the latest in lighting effects, and good accoustics." I'm sure in the not too distant future that this building will be a reality here, as someone here in the Sikeston Bootheel area liking the arts will donate a huge contribution to build it, or at least start the drive for such a center. -- (This does happen so many, many times where someone donates $100,000 to $500,000 and then it's named for them. -- I'm thinking now of the new one in Houston, "The Kaulaa Center" where she donated one million to the art for the building -- and Queeny Towers in St. Louis, where Mr. Queeny donated $500,000 to build that addition to the hospital -- and a leading university received a huge donation for a library in memory of a ladies son.) -- That actually brings me to the reason I write this. This week another big event in the arts will happen in Sikeston. It's the Little Theatre's presentation of "The King and I" with a cast of 70 and some 75 others helping with the sets, costumes, make up, publicity, dances, lighting, painting, prompting, building of sets, directing and music. (In items of money all this could amounts of 15 or 20 thousand dollars). I won't attempt to name anyone in the cast, as they are all great, and what beautiful singing and acting as this play begins to "shape up" for opening night Friday. Four names do stand out night now and they are Hope Terrell, Ernie Elledge, Jo Ann Fox and Richard Fussell -- they are directors and set designers. I would like to say though, that Thedamay Cleek has certainly been writing some great articles for your paper about "The King and I" and let me tell you the words she's been using have not been exaggerated, such as "Great, Beautiful, Magnificient, Gorgeous, Vivid, Powerful, Colorful, dynamic, etc. I've been trying to find a word that she didn't use that night add to it -- all I can come up with is that long word from "Mary Poppins" -- that is "Supercalifragilisticexpevalidous" -- Yes, this "King and I" is certainly going to be Supercalifragilisticexpilividous." (I hope that word means what it sounds like -- the biggest and greatest."

I know many people including myself journey to Memphis, St. Louis and Kansas City to see shows at the open air theatres but I'll tell them this, "I hope anyone that likes any kind of singing or acting will see this production. It certainly ranks with the best in the Little Theatre's repetorie of past productions. (Two of the best of which I think or can remember right now were "The Miracle Worker" and last years "Sound of Music." There will be extra performances for this one too and the tickets will be $1.50 adults and $1.00 children and these can be purchased at the door or from any member. So I'm asking everyone to try to attend this "Supercalifragilisticexpivalidous" play. -- Thanks always for the good publicity you give to everyone on any civic project.

Sincerely Yours
John W. Davis

P. S. Just in case someone writes back and says "Why doesn't he make the First Big donation," I'll say this, "If I had it I would."

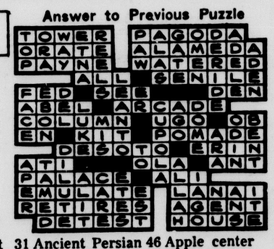
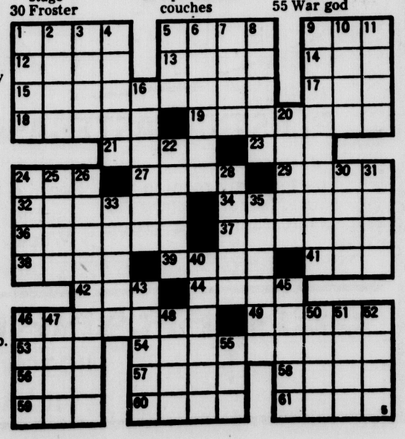
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Today In U.S. History

Today is Thursday, May 5th, the 125th day of 1966. There are 240 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1936, Italy proclaimed the conquest of Ethiopia.

On this date

In 1775, Benjamin Franklin returned from London and a long and vain effort against arbitrary taxation of the colonies.

In 1821, Napoleon Bonaparte died on the island of St. Helena.

In 1847, the American medical association was organized.

In 1942, the rationing of sugar began throughout the United States.

In 1955, the Federal Republic of Germany --Western Germany --became a sovereign state.

Ten years ago . . Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson decisively defeated Gov. Allan Shivers for the leadership of the Texas Democratic party in precinct conventions.

Five years ago . . in a sub-orbital flight, Commander Alan B. Shepard Jr. was rocketed 116 miles above the earth in a Mercury Capsule and landed safely in the Atlantic.

One year ago . . two contending forces in the Dominican Republic signed a formal truce agreement -- but fighting continued in Santo Domingo.

MOTHER'S DAY

There is a certain Day, that comes once a year.
It's called Mother's Day, for all Mothers dear.
Let's do our very best, to our Mothers be kind,
On Mother's Day, for your Mother and mine.

Now there's only one other, that has greater love, than our own dear Mother--
And that's God above.
I know He sent mine, from Heaven to me, her sweet
Smiling face I keep longing to see.

If I took all the money I've earned thru the years,
And gave it to Mother, for her sorrows and tears
I could never repay her, for all that's she's done--
The way that she raised us, when we were young.

So always be kind, and good to your Mother,
For after she's gone, you'll never have another,
That will take her place completely--I know--
For I lost my mother a long time ago.

I know she's in Heaven with the Angels tonight--
One of the stars that's shining so bright--
Guiding my footsteps--
Where-ever I go.
Dear Mother up in Heaven--
Here on earth, we miss you so.

said, authorities in Saigon referred the question of disclosure to Washington--apparently after press dispatches from the scene had reported it. Washington authorities reportedly instructed headquarters in Saigon not to volunteer information on the incident but to say what had happened if asked.

The policy covering this operation was made known by the State Department last Dec. 21 --in as obscure a manner as officials could devise. There had been many reports and complaints of Viet Cong forces taking refuge in the Cambodian jungles as well as complaints by Combodia of border violations by American or South Vietnamese forces.

Finally, when a State Department spokesman was pressed to reveal what orders U.S. commanders had, he replied that "American military commanders throughout the world have authority to take those actions essential in the exercise of the inherent right of self-defense to protect their forces."

This was understood to mean that American troops engaged in search and destroy operations in the Vietnamese jungles that have long formed a Viet Cong stronghold near the Cambodian border could fire back if they came under attack on the Cambodian side.

Dispatches from Saigon said there had been earlier reports of such firing but that none had drawn official confirmation until the spokesman's statement earlier this week.

U.S. air operations over Laos began in May 1964. The State Department said at that time that the neutralist government of Laos had requested aerial reconnaissance to get information on positions of Communist troops.

That information was made available here after Communist China broadcast that Communist forces in Laos had fired on U.S. aircraft.

In early June 1964, an unarmed reconnaissance plane was reported shot down by Communist fire. The next day a U.S. Navy jet fighter also was reported shot down. On June 8 Washington officials said that fighter planes escorting the unarmed reconnaissance aircraft had received orders to fire on Communist military installations when necessary to protect the reconnaissance craft.

Westmoreland was pictured as believing the hope of being sent home after a year in the war is a major factor in high U. S. troop morale in Viet Nam.

In outlining the sources of replacements for Army troops in Viet Nam, Wheeler said some of the men that are training at various camps around the country will be part of this replacement group.

"Some will be people who have returned from Europe," he said. "Some will be people who are taken from other stations such as Panama and Alaska."

He indicated that the replacements will be shuttled into Viet Nam on an individual, rather than a unit basis.

B52

Americans killed, 589 wounded and seven missing or captured last week compared with 35 killed, 547 wounded, and eight missing or captured in the week of April 17-23.

Since Jan. 1, 1961, a total of 3,152 Americans have been killed in battle or died of combat wounds.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 227 government troops killed and 29 missing compared with 93 killed and 33 missing last week wounded figures are not announced.

Other allied forces reported two dead and 11 wounded, down from 32 killed and 19 wounded in the previous week.

Communist losses declined to 456 reported killed and 98 captured. The week before, Viet Cong casualties were put at 694 killed and 69 captured.

The enemy figures dropped below this in the week of Jan. 16-22 when the allies reported 408 Communists killed. The highest enemy death toll came in the week of March 20-26 when 1,988 were reported killed.

The B52 raid was carried out in the Communist C zone in Tay Ninh province where troops of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division are trying to root out the Viet Cong in Operation Birmingham.

It was the fifth day in a row and the eighth day of the past nine that the eight-jet bombers returned to the area from their bases on Guam.

On Tuesday and again Wednesday, all Air Force strikes against North Viet Nam were called off because of the monsoon weather there. The Navy flew only eight missions Tuesday and 22 Wednesday in the north, hitting mostly at Costal targets.

In South Viet Nam, U.S. pilots flew 300 sorties Wednesday and South Vietnamese pilots flew 207 against Viet Cong targets.

DESERTERS

American authorities believe one reason for the climb is the worsening of the Viet Cong's military position.

A major factor also is the "chieu hoi," or open arms, program undertaken two years ago by the Saigon government under American sponsorship.

Using psychological warfare --largely leaflets and front-line loudspeakers -- the government promises Viet Cong defectors good treatment. It also encourages them to bring over weapons, offering rewards up to 20,000 piastres ($274) for a 57mm recoilless rifle.

The propaganda also plays on the hardships of life under the Viet Cong.

A returnee, as he is called by the South Vietnamese government, is first sent to an "open arms" center for 45 days to be checked and rehabilitated.

Then he is sent back to his native locality if it is in government hands. If not, he is resettled elsewhere.

The government is building 16 resettlement centers for returnees and their families. Each center will accommodate 100 families.

The returnee is given a small sum of money and rice for six months. He is exempt from the army draft for a year. If he joins a propaganda team to lure other Viet Cong defectors he is given a salary, an allowance and an 18-month draft deferment.

One Injury In Semo Yesterday

A single injury resulted from seven accidents in Southeast Missouri yesterday.

Mary Layton, 39, Perryville, suffered a minor neck injury, while a passenger in a 1963 Plymouth, driven by Hattie Prevallet, 36, Perryville.

The driver of the Plymouth stopped to make a left turn, when her car was struck in the rear by a 1964 Buick, driven by Reeva Feltz, 52, route one, Perryville.

The injured woman was taken to the Perry County Memorial Hospital, Perryville.

Williams Says U. S. Is Rationing Bombs

WASHINGTON AP -- Republican Sen. John J. Williams said today the United States is "rationing bombs" in Viet Nam.

He coupled that with a charge the administration "allowed the situation to deteriorate in Viet Nam" during President Johnson's 1964 campaign against Republican challenger Barry Goldwater.

"Why have the American people not been told the truth about the seriousness of the situation in Southeast Asia?" Williams asked in a speech prepared for a conference of Republican women.

"Shortages have developed. We are now rationing bombs and other military supplies," the Delaware senator said. "Why did the administration fool the American people? Was the election of any public official more important than the life of an American boy?"

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has denied U.S. forces in South Viet Nam face supply shortages.

Williams said that during the campaign Johnson "accused Goldwater of being a trigger-happy warmonger for proposing some of the same military steps that he took immediately after the election".

Goldwater addresses the GOP women after Williams today.

Williams said he was not passing judgment on the wisdom of the military steps ordered by Johnson in the Vietnamese war.

"But why were Goldwater's suggestions denounced so viciously during the campaign and then after the election adopted by President Johnson?" he asked.

Williams did not say what Goldwater suggestions he had in mind.

"Why did Mr. McNamara, the secretary of defense, early in 1964 promise that American boys would be home by Christmas when they knew conditions in that area were rapidly deteriorating?" Williams asked.

He added: "To show just how bad the administration allowed the situation to deteriorate in Viet Nam during the campaign months, I quote Secretary McNamara's statement on Nov. 20, 1964, just two weeks after the elections.

"This statement was in response to a newsman's request to interview Gen. Maxwell Taylor, former ambassador to Viet Nam:

"It would be impossible for Max to talk to these people without leaving the impression that the situation is going to hell."

School Tax Confuses

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri legislators hammered away again today on two major problems, trying for adjournment of the special session during the day.

House and Senate conferees worked out a compromise Wednesday on the final catch-all appropriations bill. Its chances of acceptance appeared good.

But a proposed constitutional amendment on school taxes was mired in a confused conflict.

Originally it was designed to keep a local school tax levy from dropping back to the basic $1.25 levy if voters defeated a proposed increase.

But during its course through the House it picked up a complex amendment that would allow 25 per cent of the voters or 10,000, whichever number was smaller, to petition for a tax reduction if (1) the school board made no change in the levy or (2) if a levy increase was defeated.

The Senate, after two hours of confusion, refused to accept that Wednesday night and sent the measure back to the House, asking for a conference attempt at compromise.

The House had refused earlier to grant a conference on its own version of the proposal.

Senate opponents said the House plan would cause more problems than it would solve. They suggested the whole issue be postponed until the regular legislative session next January.

Even the sponsor, Sen. Willian B. Waters, D-Liberty, admitted it had some flaws but said it was in fair shape for presentation to the voters.

Leaders of both houses looked for final adjournment during the day but the session could run until the constitutional deadline, Friday at midnight.

Viet Nam War Spilling Into Laos and Cambodia

BOY AND GIRL Scout troops of the Okeechobee District received $100 yesterday from the Lions Club for their activity funds. The two checks were presented to Bill Huff, right, for the Girl Scouts, and Judge Marshall Craig, center, for the Boy Scouts, from Lions Club President Ken Smitten.

WASHINGTON AP -- The war in Viet Nam has been spilling over into Laos and Cambodia and the United States is encountering more difficulty in obscuring the fact.

Two unusual official disclosures in the last three days have thrown fresh light on the involvement in combat actions of territories in both Laos and Cambodia.

In Washington, the Defense Department reported for the first time on casualties in air operations over Laos.

The reports showed that in the past two years 11 U.S. flyers have been killed there and somewhat fewer than 20 others have been listed as missing or captured by Communist forces.

And in Saigon, a U.S. spokesman confirmed accounts from news correspondents on the scene that last Saturday American artillery fired across a boundary river into Cambodian jungles to silence enemy guns when U.S. troops ran into heavy fire from Viet Cong forces on the Cambodian side.

Washington authorities asserted that in the prolonged operations over Laos and in the brief clash across the Cambodian border, the Communists were responsible for initial violations of territory outside Viet Nam and that the U.S. fire was defensive.

Officials in Washington denied that this week's unusual disclosures resulted from any policy decision to signal a new and broader phase of warfare in Southeast Asia. Basic U.S. policy, they said, is still to keep the conflict confined to Viet Nam but Communist actions sometimes force counteractions outside that country.

When such actions do occur the practice of the State and Defense departments have been to say nothing about them if possible and otherwise to make minimum disclosure. The justification offered for this practice is that sensitive relations with other governments are involved.

As the Viet Nam war grows in intensity, however, it is now recognized here that the policy of silence may very well be more difficult to maintain.

In the current case of the report of casualties suffered over Laos, officials said the Defense Department had received queries about a week ago concerning notification given to a family of a lost flyer. The family reportedly was informed that the loss had occurred over Laos.

When Pentagon officials looked into the matter, it was said, they found that the identification of Laos as the scene of combat operations had been given in notices sent to a number of families and they therefore decided that since this information had been officially provided to next of kin they should issue a casualty report in response to inquiries.

In the case of the fight across the Cambodian border, officials

B52 Bombers Continue Plastering Stronghold

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- High-flying B52 bombers plastered the Viet Cong stronghold near the Cambodian border today for a fifth successive day.

The American Stratoforts dropped their 750-pound bombs on a suspected Communist arms factory and training area 75 miles northwest of Saigon.

Over North Viet Nam, U.S. Air Force and Navy fighter-bombers renewed their attacks in force after a two-day lull during which their flights were almost washed out by monsoon rains.

In the renewed aerial assaults in the north, a U.S. spokesman reported that an F105 Thunderchief was shot down by enemy ground fire 65 miles northeast of Hanoi. The pilot parachuted and was seen on the ground but a rescue attempt was thwarted by heavy antiaircraft fire.

It was the 229th U.S. plane reported lost over North Viet Nam.

An Air Force F42 Phantom jet ditched off the coast of South Viet Nam near the Cam Ranh Bay air base, 170 miles northeast of Saigon, after it ran out of fuel Wednesday. Both crewmen ejected and were rescued.

All 21 U.S. servicemen aboard a U.S. Army CH47 Chinook helicopter were killed when the helicopter caught fire and crashed Wednesday night in heavy jungle 110 miles northeast of Saigon.

It was one of the worst helicopter disasters of the war. A spokesman said the big helicopter "burst into flames in the air but there was no evidence of enemy action." Aboard were an Army crew of five and 16 soldiers.

U.S. and other allied combat dead nearly doubled last week, while the number of Viet Cong killed declined to the second lowest level of the year, the allied military commands reported.

The losses on both sides continued to reflect a relative lull in the ground war, with total casualties below figures earlier in the year.

A U. S. spokesman reported 70

$302 Million Cut From Johnson

WASHINGTON AP -- The House Appropriations Committee slashed more than $302 million today from the $14.3 billion President Johnson requested to finance 24 federal agencies next year.

It was the first substantial reduction recommended by the committee in five big money bills this session. The committee's approval of several hefty increases in earlier bills has prompted the President to criticize congressional spenders.

But if the committee's action today is sustained next week by the House, it may evoke more presidential criticism.

Among other cuts, the committee knocked out the entire $19.7 million requested to get Project Mohole going. This is a National Science Foundation project to drill deep into the earth beneath the seat to try to find out about the earth's age, make-up and other scientific data. Congress has provided $55.4 million for the project over the past four years.

In ordering the project terminated, the committee said the cost already has greatly exceeded original estimates and the additional money requested "can be more advantageously used in other activities."

The committee let the ax fall on another administration project--the rent subsidy program enacted last year to provide better private housing for low-income families through a system of supplemental payments to landlords.

The President requested $35 million for new rent subsidy contracts for next year plus $3 million for payments on contracts already made. The committee cut the new funds to $20 million and chopped $1 million from the 1966 payments.

It included language limiting use of any of the money to projects "officially approved by the local community concerned." Minority groups have interpreted this provision as designed to keep them out of new suburban housing.

The over-all budget of the Department of Housing and Urban Development was cut from $710.4 million to $637 million. The reductions included $5 million in urban planning grants, $8 million in grants to develop neighborhood facilities and $10 million in payments to local housing authorities.

The entire $5.1 million requested for grants for training programs in community development was turned down.

Raise $1,400 In Sikeston

The American Cancer Society's 1966 April Crusade has ended with $1,400 raised in Sikeston.

John Scarbrough and Dan Limbaugh, chairman of the crusade, said this is only a preliminary figure.

While the crusade is officially at an end, Scarbrough and Limbaugh made two appeals for continued action: If for some reason or other, a volunteer has not been able to reach certain families, make another effort to reach them and if you-- a member of the public -- did not contribute during the crusade, do so now by sending a contribution to the American Cancer Society, P. O. Box 201, Sikeston, Mo. Also ask for a copy of a leaflet giving the basic ways you can help protect yourself from death from cancer.

Scarbrough and Limbaugh were enthusiastic in praise of the work of all the volunteers. "Of course," they said, "it meant tired feet and hands, time and energy.

Mrs. Billie Burch, the Scott County chairman, said returns are still coming in and the final total for the county should be over $2,000.

Deserters In Viet Nam War

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP-- A lot of soldiers on both sides are deserting in Viet Nam.

Defections from the Communist Viet Cong are running more than 2,300 a month, American officials report.

Against this, the officials say desertions from the South Vietnamese regular army run currently at 6,600 a month, with additional desertions from the regional and the popular forces.

These figures must be considered in proportion. The government military strength is estimated at 600,000, including auxiliary units. The Viet Cong guerrillas, plus North Vietnamese regulars and village auxiliaries, are estimated to total 200,000 to 250,000.

Most deserters from the South Vietnamese army do not go over to the Viet Cong. Instead they return to their homes, go into hiding or filter into the cities looking for work. Some reenlist later.

The rate of desertion -- nothing new in this land -- continues to cause deep concern for both the South Vietnamese government and the American military.

They draw some encouragement from the rising number of Viet Cong defections.

These totaled 2,336 in March, the highest so far, and American officials say a quarter of them were officers. Viet Cong defections, less than 1,000 a month last year, rose to 1,672 in January and 2,011 in February.

Relief To Be Sent

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Army is preparing to provide more than 100,000 replacements for Viet Nam this summer and fall.

The other services also face the replacement problem, but to a lesser degree than the Army, which has pumped the greatest number of troops by far into Viet Nam since the buildup began last July.

Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told Congress in recently released testimony that "the big demand for replacements will start in July and extend through October, because that will be one year after the bulk of the Army and Marine Corps forces were deployed to Viet Nam."

Wheeler said "the Army has planned programs to provide the required number of people, which will total something over 100,000."

The replacement "hump" stems from the one-year tour of duty required for U. S. servicemen sent to Viet Nam. They may stay longer, but only if they volunteer for an extension.

Sources said Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U. S. commander in Viet Nam, strongly favors retaining the one-year tour, even though a stretchout would relieve the manpower squeeze of the services in the United States and elsewhere.

Last Ditch Look

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- The House and Senate took a look today at the last ditch compromise appropriation bill their conferees finally produced late Wednesday.

It was up nearly half a million dollars in general revenue from the Senate version but still was over $700,000 below the figure the House approved earlier.

The House-Senate conference committee worked behind closed doors for many hours before settling on figures they hoped both houses would find acceptable.

The final product showed these changes from the tight bill the Senate passed:

For an attendant training program at St. Louis State School and Hospital, $64,000. The House had approved $100,000 for additional personnel at the institution but the Senate had deleted the item.

Land acquisition and development of state parks, $50,000 for a total of $200,000.

For a federal - state program of prisoner rehabilitation, $43,000 in state money which will make about $500,000 in federal money available.

For the newly created office of state and regional planning, $115,500.

Williams Says U. S. Is Rationing Bombs

WASHINGTON AP -- Republican Sen. John J. Williams said today the United States is "rationing bombs" in Viet Nam.

He coupled that with a charge the administration "allowed the situation to deteriorate in Viet Nam" during President Johnson's 1964 campaign against Republican challenger Barry Goldwater.

"Why have the American people not been told the truth about the seriousness of the situation in Southeast Asia?" Williams asked in a speech prepared for a conference of Republican women.

"Shortages have developed. We are now rationing bombs and other military supplies," the Delaware senator said. "Why did the administration fool the American people? Was the election of any public official more important than the life of an American boy?"

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has denied U.S. forces in South Viet Nam face supply shortages.

Williams said that during the campaign Johnson "accused Goldwater of being a trigger-happy warmonger for proposing some of the same military steps that he took immediately after the election".

Goldwater addresses the GOP women after Williams today.

Williams said he was not passing judgment on the wisdom of the military steps ordered by Johnson in the Vietnamese war.

"But why were Goldwater's suggestions denounced so viciously during the campaign and then after the election adopted by President Johnson?" he asked.

Williams did not say what Goldwater suggestions he had in mind.

"Why did Mr. McNamara, the secretary of defense, early in 1964 promise that American boys would be home by Christmas when they knew conditions in that area were rapidly deteriorating?" Williams asked.

He added: "To show just how bad the administration allowed the situation to deteriorate in Viet Nam during the campaign months, I quote Secretary McNamara's statement on Nov. 20, 1964, just two weeks after the elections.

"This statement was in response to a newsman's request to interview Gen. Maxwell Taylor, former ambassador to Viet Nam:

"It would be impossible for Max to talk to these people without leaving the impression that the situation is going to hell."

School Tax Confuses

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri legislators hammered away again today on two major problems, trying for adjournment of the special session during the day.

House and Senate conferees worked out a compromise Wednesday on the final catch-all appropriations bill. Its chances of acceptance appeared good.

But a proposed constitutional amendment on school taxes was mired in a confused conflict.

Originally it was designed to keep a local school tax levy from dropping back to the basic $1.25 levy if voters defeated a proposed increase.

But during its course through the House it picked up a complex amendment that would allow 25 per cent of the voters or 10,000, whichever number was smaller, to petition for a tax reduction if (1) the school board made no change in the levy or (2) if a levy increase was defeated.

The Senate, after two hours of confusion, refused to accept that Wednesday night and sent the measure back to the House, asking for a conference attempt at compromise.

The House had refused earlier to grant a conference on its own version of the proposal.

Senate opponents said the House plan would cause more problems than it would solve. They suggested the whole issue be postponed until the regular legislative session next January.

Even the sponsor, Sen. Willian B. Waters, D-Liberty, admitted it had some flaws but said it was in fair shape for presentation to the voters.

Leaders of both houses looked for final adjournment during the day but the session could run until the constitutional deadline, Friday at midnight.

Viet Nam War Spilling Into Laos and Cambodia

BOY AND GIRL Scout troops of the Okeechobee District received $100 yesterday from the Lions Club for their activity funds. The two checks were presented to Bill Huff, right, for the Girl Scouts, and Judge Marshall Craig, center, for the Boy Scouts, from Lions Club President Ken Smitten.

WASHINGTON AP -- The war in Viet Nam has been spilling over into Laos and Cambodia and the United States is encountering more difficulty in obscuring the fact.

Two unusual official disclosures in the last three days have thrown fresh light on the involvement in combat actions of territories in both Laos and Cambodia.

In Washington, the Defense Department reported for the first time on casualties in air operations over Laos.

The reports showed that in the past two years 11 U.S. flyers have been killed there and somewhat fewer than 20 others have been listed as missing or captured by Communist forces.

And in Saigon, a U.S. spokesman confirmed accounts from news correspondents on the scene that last Saturday American artillery fired across a boundary river into Cambodian jungles to silence enemy guns when U.S. troops ran into heavy fire from Viet Cong forces on the Cambodian side.

Washington authorities asserted that in the prolonged operations over Laos and in the brief clash across the Cambodian border, the Communists were responsible for initial violations of territory outside Viet Nam and that the U.S. fire was defensive.

Officials in Washington denied that this week's unusual disclosures resulted from any policy decision to signal a new and broader phase of warfare in Southeast Asia. Basic U.S. policy, they said, is still to keep the conflict confined to Viet Nam but Communist actions sometimes force counteractions outside that country.

When such actions do occur the practice of the State and Defense departments have been to say nothing about them if possible and otherwise to make minimum disclosure. The justification offered for this practice is that sensitive relations with other governments are involved.

As the Viet Nam war grows in intensity, however, it is now recognized here that the policy of silence may very well be more difficult to maintain.

In the current case of the report of casualties suffered over Laos, officials said the Defense Department had received queries about a week ago concerning notification given to a family of a lost flyer. The family reportedly was informed that the loss had occurred over Laos.

When Pentagon officials looked into the matter, it was said, they found that the identification of Laos as the scene of combat operations had been given in notices sent to a number of families and they therefore decided that since this information had been officially provided to next of kin they should issue a casualty report in response to inquiries.

In the case of the fight across the Cambodian border, officials

B52 Bombers Continue Plastering Stronghold

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- High-flying B52 bombers plastered the Viet Cong stronghold near the Cambodian border today for a fifth successive day.

The American Stratoforts dropped their 750-pound bombs on a suspected Communist arms factory and training area 75 miles northwest of Saigon.

Over North Viet Nam, U.S. Air Force and Navy fighter-bombers renewed their attacks in force after a two-day lull during which their flights were almost washed out by monsoon rains.

In the renewed aerial assaults in the north, a U.S. spokesman reported that an F105 Thunderchief was shot down by enemy ground fire 65 miles northeast of Hanoi. The pilot parachuted and was seen on the ground but a rescue attempt was thwarted by heavy antiaircraft fire.

It was the 229th U.S. plane reported lost over North Viet Nam.

An Air Force F42 Phantom jet ditched off the coast of South Viet Nam near the Cam Ranh Bay air base, 170 miles northeast of Saigon, after it ran out of fuel Wednesday. Both crewmen ejected and were rescued.

All 21 U.S. servicemen aboard a U.S. Army CH47 Chinook helicopter were killed when the helicopter caught fire and crashed Wednesday night in heavy jungle 110 miles northeast of Saigon.

It was one of the worst helicopter disasters of the war. A spokesman said the big helicopter "burst into flames in the air but there was no evidence of enemy action." Aboard were an Army crew of five and 16 soldiers.

U.S. and other allied combat dead nearly doubled last week, while the number of Viet Cong killed declined to the second lowest level of the year, the allied military commands reported.

The losses on both sides continued to reflect a relative lull in the ground war, with total casualties below figures earlier in the year.

A U. S. spokesman reported 70

$302 Million Cut From Johnson

WASHINGTON AP -- The House Appropriations Committee slashed more than $302 million today from the $14.3 billion President Johnson requested to finance 24 federal agencies next year.

It was the first substantial reduction recommended by the committee in five big money bills this session. The committee's approval of several hefty increases in earlier bills has prompted the President to criticize congressional spenders.

But if the committee's action today is sustained next week by the House, it may evoke more presidential criticism.

Among other cuts, the committee knocked out the entire $19.7 million requested to get Project Mohole going. This is a National Science Foundation project to drill deep into the earth beneath the seat to try to find out about the earth's age, make-up and other scientific data. Congress has provided $55.4 million for the project over the past four years.

In ordering the project terminated, the committee said the cost already has greatly exceeded original estimates and the additional money requested "can be more advantageously used in other activities."

The committee let the ax fall on another administration project--the rent subsidy program enacted last year to provide better private housing for low-income families through a system of supplemental payments to landlords.

The President requested $35 million for new rent subsidy contracts for next year plus $3 million for payments on contracts already made. The committee cut the new funds to $20 million and chopped $1 million from the 1966 payments.

It included language limiting use of any of the money to projects "officially approved by the local community concerned." Minority groups have interpreted this provision as designed to keep them out of new suburban housing.

The over-all budget of the Department of Housing and Urban Development was cut from $710.4 million to $637 million. The reductions included $5 million in urban planning grants, $8 million in grants to develop neighborhood facilities and $10 million in payments to local housing authorities.

The entire $5.1 million requested for grants for training programs in community development was turned down.

Mitchell Gives Final Report

Retiring District Lions Governor, Charles Mitchell, made his final report yesterday at a luncheon meeting held at the Country Club.

Also he said, two new clubs were organized in the district at Essex - Gray Ridge and Centerville.

Raise $1,400 In Sikeston

The American Cancer Society's 1966 April Crusade has ended with $1,400 raised in Sikeston.

John Scarbrough and Dan Limbaugh, chairman of the crusade, said this is only a preliminary figure.

While the crusade is officially at an end, Scarbrough and Limbaugh made two appeals for continued action: If for some reason or other, a volunteer has not been able to reach certain families, make another effort to reach them and if you-- a member of the public -- did not contribute during the crusade, do so now by sending a contribution to the American Cancer Society, P. O. Box 201, Sikeston, Mo. Also ask for a copy of a leaflet giving the basic ways you can help protect yourself from death from cancer.

Scarbrough and Limbaugh were enthusiastic in praise of the work of all the volunteers. "Of course," they said, "it meant tired feet and hands, time and energy.

Mrs. Billie Burch, the Scott County chairman, said returns are still coming in and the final total for the county should be over $2,000.

Deserters In Viet Nam War

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- A lot of soldiers on both sides are deserting in Viet Nam.

Defections from the Communist Viet Cong are running more than 2,300 a month, American officials report.

Against this, the officials say desertions from the South Vietnamese regular army run currently at 6,600 a month, with additional desertions from the regional and the popular forces.

These figures must be considered in proportion. The government military strength is estimated at 600,000, including auxiliary units. The Viet Cong guerrillas, plus North Vietnamese regulars and village auxiliaries, are estimated to total 200,000 to 250,000.

Most deserters from the South Vietnamese army do not go over to the Viet Cong. Instead they return to their homes, go into hiding or filter into the cities looking for work. Some reenlist later.

The rate of desertion -- nothing new in this land -- continues to cause deep concern for both the South Vietnamese government and the American military.

They draw some encouragement from the rising number of Viet Cong defections.

These totaled 2,336 in March, the highest so far, and American officials say a quarter of them were officers. Viet Cong defections, less than 1,000 a month last year, rose to 1,672 in January and 2,011 in February.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Thursday, May 5, 1745, Vienna, Austria: The Duke of Sczerny orders a whipped cream harpsichord.

ON MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's Day celebrates motherhood. It centers attention on those who gave us birth and who, in our earliest years, gave life its direction. The fact is that in the hands of the mothers of the world lie those potent influences which may make or mar life.

No other person can take the place of mother. Others may furnish a child with an education, provide a home for him, give him money and look after his physical needs; but no one except a mother can give herself with that utter abandon that we associate with motherhood. She asks nothing in return.

It is to their mothers that children look for those little things that are so dear to childish hearts and which make life so innocently happy and worthwhile. It is beside them they kneel when they are taught to say their childhood prayers. It is to them they look with confidence for advice and help. To them they go when injured in body or bruised in spirit. To them they tell their trials and troubles and difficulties--all in the knowldege that they will find in mother a sympathetic and understanding ear and a heart of love. What bruises and heartaches she has healed! What comfort she has given! What loving ministrations of a thousand kinds have been hers!

Miss Ann Jarvis of Philadelphia, who originated the idea of Mother's Day many years ago, deserves a place in the national memory for thus calling attention to the debt that children owe their mothers. As a result of her efforts, the United States Congress on May 10, 1913, passed a resolution making the second Sunday in May a national holiday "dedicated to the memory of the best mother in the world, your mother."

First recognized in the United States as a national institution, Mother's Day has since spread to other parts of the world. It is a day of remembrance. It should also be a day of rededication to the moral and spiritual principles of Christian motherhood. Lives should be ennobled by the contemplation of such principles and such ideals; it should be hallowed by the memory of those who, by lives of unselfish devotion, have given courage and inspiration for noble living.

What America needs today is more praying mothers, whomen who are spiritually minded, who recognize the key position they occupy simply by virtue of being mothers. America should hark back to the hardy virtues of the pioneers of an earlier generation. Our nation needs today not so much some economic panacea, some new system of balancing the national budget, some better controlled space missile or some new international policy; what it needs most are the inspiration and guidance to be gained from a genuinely Christian motherhood.

Mother's Day marks the annual occasion on which, as a nation, we acknowledge special respect to, and reverence for, motherhood--a motherhood characterized by those qualities which we look up to as ideals towards which we should all constantly strive.

This Mother's Day ought to inspire us, young and old alike, with a passion for doing right because it is right; with a determination to live more wholesomely and more unselfishly because we have taken time once more to recall our own mothers and those glorious virtues--purity, honor, modesty, kindliness, virtue, unselfish devotion and parental love--that we associate with ideal motherhood.

EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE

A FREEDOM OF INFORMATION BILL looks at long last to be sure of adoption at this session of Congress. The Senate passed it last October after a 10-year fight. The bill does not bear the imprint of the Johnson administration, and there has been some speculation about a veto. But one of the chief sponsors, Rep. John E. Moss (D Calif.), said on April 27 that he did not think the President would block the measure.

The statement was made as the House Government Operations Committee was approving the Senate bill, clearing it for action by the whole House. In broad terms, the measure establishes the legal principle that every citizen has the right to examine his government's records. Specifically exempted are personnel files, security matters, trade secrets, and investigative dossiers of law enforcement agencies.

The Justice Department, in addition to opposing the bill in general, has sought unsuccessfully to write into it specific affirmation of the President's right to exercise "executive privilege" in withholding information. The doctrine of executive privilege is one which Congress has never accepted. Nevertheless, it is understood that the House Government Operations Committee's final report will contain language stating the measure did not affect the principle.

ONE OF THE EARLIEST INSTANCES of Presidential refusal of a congressional request for information occurred in 1796. The House called for the instructions that had been given to Chief Justice Jay when he went to England in 1794 to negotiate the treaty bearing his name. President Washington, with the unanimous support of his Cabinet, refused to comply on the ground that disclosure would have an unfavorable effect on future foreign negotiations. Moreover, the first President found that the request was not "relative to any purpose under cognizance of the House of Representatives."

Later Presidents have been no less jealous of their prerogatives. Theodore Roosevelt sent the Senate the declaration that "The heads of departments are subject to the Constitution and laws passed by Congress. . .and to the direction of the President of the United States, and to no other direction whatever."

Conflict between Congress and the Executive over employee loyalty data began in the F.D. Roosevelt administration and reached a fever in the Truman administration. Throughout the McCarthy investigations and MacArthur hearings Truman stood on high ground.

THE SEPARATION OF GOVERNMENTAL POWERS provided by the U.S. Constitution is the root of the doctrine of executive privilege. The relative independence of the three coordinate branches of government forecloses coercion of one by another. The only recourse of Congress is to institute impeachment proceedings. Refusal to furnish information is hardly the sort of high crime that would call for removal from office.

As early as 1803 the Supreme Court clothed persons appointed by the President with his authority, saying that when they performed duties "in conformity with his orders" then "their acts are his acts." In 1941 Atty. Gen. Jackson (later Supreme Court Justice) cited a long list of cases for the House Naval Affairs Committee and said: "The courts have repeatedly held that they will not and cannot require the Executive to produce. . .papers when in the opinion of the Executive their production is contrary to the public interest." The courts would be even less likely to honor a citizen or press demand for Executive papers.

The Democratic party has a big job ahead even for the inexhaustible President Lyndon B. Johnson.

It began Thursday night -- Texas size -- with the unveiling of the 1966 fund raising campaign. President Johnson attended a fund raising President's Club ball in Houston.

Anyone willing to part with $1,000 can join the President's club.

Membership privileges include occasional briefings by cabinet members, a presidential handshake or autographed picture and the possibility of being invited to a White House reception.

Speeches at club gatherings are brief and informal.

The technique works well.

President John F. Kennedy organized a club five years ago to help meet his 1960 campaign deficit. The club became the Democrats' chief source of financial support.

In the 1964 campaign gifts of $500 or more accounted for 69 per cent of all money entering party coffers.

The Democrats hope to raise $6 million by November--$2 million to liquidate the 1964 campaign debt, $4 million to help elect this year's candidates for state and national office.

The number of President's club functions is a closely guarded secret if it is in fact known.

But the President has his work cut out for him traveling, eating, handshaking and dancing if the party raises $6 million in six months.

Only a superman could do it and for a man occupying the awesome presidential job at the same time, the task calls for working a miracle.

NEW YORK AP -- Are you forging ahead in life's rat race? Or are you just a treadmill mouse that has fallen behind?

Surprisingly, many people don't know for sure.

It isn't always easy to tell.

There are, however, certain symbols of status. Here are a few unmistakable signs:

Your wife raises by at least $1 the amount she daily doles out to you as lunch money.

One of the two or three television sets in your home is a color set.

Some of the officials at the bank where you keep your checking account recognize you when you enter. If your account is occasionally overdrawn, they don't make a federal case of it.

At quitting time you don't have to tote home a briefcase stuffed with newspapers just to prove how hard you are working.

Instead of talking about office problems, the boss likes to chat with you about his golf scores.

If you don't have an office of your own, at least your desk is by a window with a nice view.

The senior vice president hates you and regards you as a conniving young whippersnapper.

All the other ambitious guys your age in the office secretly dislike you, too, although they try to be publicly palsy-walsy.

When you pause to compliment your pastor after his Sunday sermon, he pats you on the arm as he shakes hands.

If the firm buys a table at a public dinner, you and your wife get your tickets weeks ahead of the event--not the day before after some other executive decides he can't make it.

You have become so important that no one else in the organization any longer can steal your ideas without at least giving you credit for them.

The boss's wife confides to your wife what an old meanier her husband is around the home.

You feel free to have a martini at lunch without gulping three packages of mints afterward to kill your breath.

Your wife realizes that you are so tired from making big decisions at the office all day that she doesn't mind going alone to P-TA meetings.

You decide that the college you went to isn't good enough for your children. It doesn't have quite the right standing.

The new friends you make dress better than the old friends you now see less often, but every once in a while you wonder if you really like them as well or trust them as much.

You get paid once a month instead of once a week like the office peons, and the office mails your check directly to your bank.

If you wear bow ties, the office boys start wearing bow ties also.

That's the best of all success signs. When the office boys start imitating you, you know you're a winner.

You Bet Your Life

Praises of the flowering dogwood, national symbol of spring, have been sung by American poets, writers and statesmen since the early days of the republic. . .George Washington planted the snowy-white blossomed tree at Mount Vernon and it still stands today. . .His love of the dogwood is memorialized at Valley Forge, which has 50,000 trees--said to be the most magnificent display in the world. . .Thomas Jefferson also had great affection for the tree and used it in his landscaping of Monticello and the University of Virginia. . .

Such well-known literary figures as Henry David Thoreau, Christropher Morley, Jesse Stuart and A. E. Houseman have paid tribute to the flowering tree. . . .To some it is the "bride of spring." To others the "sun" of day and the "moon" of night. . . .From Jamestown Island to the Blue Ridge in Virginia, from Memphis to the Great Smokies in Tennessee and from Nashville to Roanoke Island in North Carolina, the drifts of the dogwood are heralded in the literature of the states. . . .

The dogwood has been revered since ancient times, when legends grew up explaining its unique beauties. . . .According to one tale, the dogwood's snowy blossoms date from the spring day when Pierrot, climbing a ladder to brighten the moon's face with whitewash, accidentally tripped his bucket, spattering the trees below with its contents. . . .Another legend holds that the red stains on the tip of each petal date from the memory of blood shed by a beautiful Cherokee princess who was slain by a jealous brave whose suit she had rejected. . .

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Feud Brews Between Labor and Fulbright As They Pressure Him to Probe Soviet - Latin Action.

Washington, D. C.: -- Behind the scenes a quiet but taut duel is being fought between Sen. J. William Fulbright and some mighty powerful legions of President Johnson's camp--the nation's labor leaders.

East is East and West, West. But the union chiefs want the train to meet in the hearing room of Mr. Fulbright's Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

The labor movement's top officials and their own international affairs specialists have been urging the gentleman from Arkansas to take time out of his probes of the Viet Nam conflict and hold "thoroughgoing" hearings into the Communist Tri - Continental Conference held in Havana earlier this year.

Politely, but very indeed, the Senator rejected the written request of the AFL-CIO Executive Council, labor's highest policy - making presidium.

On March 4 the Council's foreign affairs specialist, Jay Lovestone, head of the AFL-CIO's Department of International Affairs, wrote Mr. Fulbright.

The globe - trotting labor man explicitly pointed to a paragraph in the Council's resolution urging the Fulbright committee to conduct "thoroughgoing hearings on the Havana Conference with the aim of enlightening the American people about its sinister aims and to propose constructive measures for defeating the Communist threat to peace and freedom in the Western Hemisphere."

On March 17, it now can be reported, Sen. Fulbright replied to Mr. Lovestone, saying that his committee had a very tough schedule and was quite occupied with the crisis in Asia.

In his letter Mr. Fulbright disclosed that his committee had been in close contact with the Executive Branch and was able to keep up with Communist activity in Latin America.

But, he added, the Committee schedule was so tight that no new matters could be taken on.

To insiders, this meant that Mr. Fulbright had turned down AFL - CIO President George Meany himself since Mr. Lovestone would most definitely not have moved without consulting his equally determined, anti-Communist chief.

Mr. Meany rarely is deflected from any cause or direction to which he is dedicated. Neither is Mr. Fulbright. So it is a matter of the immovable and irresistible again.

What concerns the AFL -CIO is the preparation by the Tri-Continental Communist Organization to hold another conference in Cuba early in 1967.

Not only is the tri-continental network aiming at guerrilla violence in such traditional hot cold - war battlefields as Venezuela and Bolivia, but in Puerto Rico as well.

Support for such action in the U. S.' island commonwealth was pledged to the Conference by the chief Soviet delegate, Sharaf Rashidov, last Jan. 6. Russia, he said, is backing "liberation movements" in Latin America, including Puerto Rico.

Amongst those who cheered were the so - called Puerto Rican delegates. They were headed by one identified as Norman Pietri, frequently quoted around the town as backing the Viet Cong.

Senor Pietri turns out to be a flamboyant speaker, running second to none in his vituperation of the U. S. Billing himself as the spokesman of the Pro-Independence Movement, he sounded, at the Havana conference, like a Lenin - era, politburo, agit - prop (agitation - propaganda) specialist.

An analysis of his major speech to the world Communist movement's tri-continental parley on Jan. 10 has just been made available.

"Comrade President, comrade delegates," says Pietri, "the Puerto Rican delegation, composed of the representatives of the Pro - Independence Movement, expresses fraternal thanks on behalf of our people."

Of course, Senor Pietri did not speak for the intensely loyal Puerto Ricans. But his small group can whip up turbulence. His speech bristled with attacks on the nine U. S. military and naval installations, the berthing of nuclear submarines, airfields, radar and training of special anti - guerrilla troops.

Pietri's long speech sounded ominous. It could be a warning of trouble to come on the prospering and peaceful island -- especially with the next Tri-Continental Organization session due in nine months.

That is why the labor people want public Senate hearings.

The East is boiling. If we don't want the West to start bubbling, now is the time to turn off the heat, say the union men. So behind the scenes they're pouring on some heat of their own -- on the gentleman from Arkansas.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Dr. Philip Lee, a two - fisted physician who has brought new life to the department of health, education, and welfare as assistant secretary, is planning to shake off the dust and ruffle the papers of various reports inside his department which cost the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars but have scarcely seen the light of day.

Particularly he is planning to reform HEW's system of giving universities grants to investigate automobile safety and then permitting the reports to be hushed up.

Last week this column reported that half a dozen or so reports on auto safety has been suppressed by Leon Goldstein, chief of Grants Research in HEW's division of accident prevention.

Dr. Lee plans to specify that when a university or any individual gets a government research grant, the contract shall set a deadline for completion of the work and that its results shall be made public.

In the past, various reports on auto safety were stalled. When researchers asked universities for the results of their work -- results which cost the taxpayers several hundred thousand dollars -- they were referred back to HEW. And When HEW was queried, the inquiries were referred back to the university.

Dr. Lee wants to end this merry-go-round.

LEGAL EAGLE

The smartest thing the Detroit motor moguls did in the auto safety hearings was to hire Lloyd Cutler as their attorney. Cutler is a close friend of Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor, who will be entrusted with enforcing the safety standards if and when congress writes them. Connor thought so highly of Cutler that he wanted to appoint him under secretary of commerce.

However, there was too much opposition, due to his representation of powerful big business clients, particularly the drug industry and the Swiss Interhandel Cartel. It was Cutler's skillful maneuvering on behalf of the drug companies, including Merck and Company, which succeeded in pulling the teeth of the Kefauver Drug Bill. Secretary Connor at that time was head of Merck and Company, one of those who retained Cutler.

Interhandel was the Swiss company which took over the assets of General Aniline and Film, the American counterpart of the Nazi Cartel I. G. Farben. The justice department in the past had branded Interhandel as a blind for the Nazis, but Cutler helped persuade Bobby Kennedy, then attorney general, to negotiate a deal which sent $100 million to the Swiss blind.

Immediately after the automobile industry retained Cutler, its image began to improve in Washington.

Working late at night over the weekend, Cutler persuaded the automobile industry to change its tactics and not oppose the administration's auto safety bill head-on. He advised an oblique attack instead. This was why the industry was credited with a "U turn" in accepting federal safety standards.

Actually this was not the case. What happened was that Cutler got the motor moguls to agree to the idea of having secretary of commerce -- at the moment John Connor, a former General Motors director -- as the man who would enforce safety standards. But Cutler turned around and proposed so many amendments against too much federal safety control that Connor, friendly as he is, will not have much authority. After all, Connor won't be in the job forever.

SAFETY-BUT WHEN?

Here are the gimmicks which Cutler proposed for the auto safety bill:

AMENDMENT NO. 1 -- Was "Delay." The automobile makers could appeal to the U.S. District Court, then to the appeals court, then to the supreme court, under Cutler's plan, if they don't like safety rulings by the secretary of commerce.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 -- Cutler proposed that the new auto safety law stretch the two - year limit for the auto industry to make design changes.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 -- Cutler has concocted a new formula for safety standards. In addition to reasonableness and practicality, he would add "cost" and whether the safety changes were "within present engineering and manufacturing art."

AMENDMENT NO. 4 -- Cutler conceived the idea of changing the proposed fine of $1,000 per vehicle, to be assessed against the motor industry for safety failure, to a total of $100,000. This is a drastic reduction, since a fine of $1,000 per vehicle could run into millions of dollars.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 -- Cutler introduced the idea of safety participation by the states. The states have a very diverse and confusing system of enforcing automobile safety, with many states having no such machinery at all. To consult the states would definitely nullify federal attempts to automobile safety.

Chief aim of the Cutler amendments is to create machinery for enforcing safety by the automobile industry, not by the U. S. government.

Note -- Secretary Connor delivered a recent speech lauding the automobile industry on safety, despite the fact that it has now called back thousands of cars to adjust defects, and despite the fact that General Motors hounded the young man who pointed to these defects, Ralph Nader, even placing a private detective on his trail.

Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson have been batting out so many important exclusive stores these days that we have had a hard time keep you up to date.

We are sure you are familiar with the series of victories they have scored through the column's revelation re Sen. Tom Dodd of Connecticut. This was climaxed on April 28 by internal revenue's announcement that it would investigate Dodd's two testimonial dinners netting $100,000, which Pearson and Anderson reported went to Dodd's private bank account.

On top of this, the Senate Ethics committee announced April 29 that it will hold public hearings on the first phase of the Dodd columns, namely Dodd's connection with a registered foreign agent, Julius Klein.

On other news fronts, Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W. Va., chairman of the House Commerce committee, announced April 26 that he was asking the department of HEW to release all the government research reports on automobile safety which Pearson that morning reported had been suppressed.

On April 27 Tom Mann resigned as deputy under secretary of state. Person had reported on April 18 that Mann was under heavy criticism from Latin American diplomats.

On April 28 the U. S. District Court followed the Pearson revelations that two D. C. painters union bosses, Robert Lowry and John T. Lyons, had criminal records, therefore must get out as head of Washington's district council 51.

On April 29 a federal court finally ratified a settlement of the Hanna mining nickel suit, thereby confirming stories unearthed by Pearson in the early days of the Eisenhower administration, 1954, reporting that the company once dominated by George M. Humphrey, then secretary of the treasury, had been given a contract to produce nickel, with fantastic profits to Hanna.

On April 25 ex-Ambassador John K. Galbraith told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that American arms assistance to India and Pakistan had caused war between the two countries. He was especially critical of arms to Pakistan. This is a point which Pearson has been reporting for the past eight years, culminating with the column on December 27, 1965, in which he gave figures on the number of Patton tanks which India had captured from Pakistan despite a Pakistani pledge to the United States that the tanks would not be used against India.

On March 20, 1966, Pearson published a private letter written by Miss Frances Knight, head of the state department's passport office, in which she enclosed a copy of a speech drafted for the Republicans for use in the 1952 campaign between Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson. In the speech she referred to Stevenson as a "glib, country club edition of Harry Truman," who used "the slickest diversionary tactics at his command to avoid the issue of Communism." Miss Knight was then working for the Truman administration.

The Pearson revelation has been the subject of widespread comment.

On February 7, 1966, the Washington merry-go-round revealed a bomb shortage in Viet Nam. This has been the subject of senate comment and a recent congressional investigation.

This is some of the news ahead of the news which Pearson and Anderson have been giving you of late.

H. L. Hunt Says

CONSTRUCTIVE, 1966, 4TH INSTALLMENT

"Constructive" is noteworthy in that it can be used either as a noun or an adjective. It can become a trademark for the sound and humanity-serving programs in the governmental, social, and economic structure of our nation. It is a word with an innate quality of orderliness and discipline. No one could ever visualize a Constructive lunatic fringe or hope to malign anyone by labeling him "super-constructive."

Patriots who have the reputation of being Conservatives, Liberals, or Constructives will find that, of the three, the title "Constructive" is best. It is a word that instantly calls to mind desirable, productive, enduring qualities.

There should be two opposing sets of principles by title, and "Constructive" and "Liberal" are ideal for meeting this need. Their two thought groups may be described as follows:

Liberal -- Those who stress privileges for the masses; holds human rights superior to property rights; stand for progress unhampered by tradition for social gains, for paternalistic government, and associated and similar objectives.

Constructive -- Those who stress freedom and individual initiative, property rights as requisite to real human rights, the incentive system, productive action, human dignity, protection from governmental monopoly and associated objectives.

A Constructive can embrace such Liberal policies as he finds acceptable. A Liberal can always be as Constructive as his progressive policies will permit. As for a "Moderate" or a "Middle-of-the-Roader," he is usually trying to be all things to all people and lacks the courage of his convictions to make a choice between Constructive and Liberal doctrines.

The pressing need is for a name that stands out as the best for describing the philosophy that calls for promoting progress, insuring freedom, national sovereignty, independence and fostering liberty and peace through strength.

Some may ask, "What's in a name?" The truthful answer can be, "The difference." HLH

ON MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's Day celebrates motherhood. It centers attention on those who gave us birth and who, in our earliest years, gave life its direction. The fact is that in the hands of the mothers of the world lie those potent influences which may make or mar life.

No other person can take the place of mother. Others may furnish a child with an education, provide a home for him, give him money and look after his physical needs; but no one except a mother can give herself with that utter abandon that we associate with motherhood. She asks nothing in return.

It is to their mothers that children look for those little things that are so dear to childish hearts and which make life so innocently happy and worthwhile. It is beside them they kneel when they are taught to say their childhood prayers. It is to them they look with confidence for advice and help. To them they go when injured in body or bruised in spirit. To them they tell their trials and troubles and difficulties--all in the knowldege that they will find in mother a sympathetic and understanding ear and a heart of love. What bruises and heartaches she has healed! What comfort she has given! What loving ministrations of a thousand kinds have been hers!

Miss Ann Jarvis of Philadelphia, who originated the idea of Mother's Day many years ago, deserves a place in the national memory for thus calling attention to the debt that children owe their mothers. As a result of her efforts, the United States Congress on May 10, 1913, passed a resolution making the second Sunday in May a national holiday "dedicated to the memory of the best mother in the world, your mother."

First recognized in the United States as a national institution, Mother's Day has since spread to other parts of the world. It is a day of remembrance. It should also be a day of rededication to the moral and spiritual principles of Christian motherhood. Lives should be ennobled by the contemplation of such principles and such ideals; it should be hallowed by the memory of those who, by lives of unselfish devotion, have given courage and inspiration for noble living.

What America needs today is more praying mothers, whomen who are spiritually minded, who recognize the key position they occupy simply by virtue of being mothers. America should hark back to the hardy virtues of the pioneers of an earlier generation. Our nation needs today not so much some economic panacea, some new system of balancing the national budget, some better controlled space missile or some new international policy; what it needs most are the inspiration and guidance to be gained from a genuinely Christian motherhood.

Mother's Day marks the annual occasion on which, as a nation, we acknowledge special respect to, and reverence for, motherhood--a motherhood characterized by those qualities which we look up to as ideals towards which we should all constantly strive.

This Mother's Day ought to inspire us, young and old alike, with a passion for doing right because it is right; with a determination to live more wholesomely and more unselfishly because we have taken time once more to recall our own mothers and those glorious virtues--purity, honor, modesty, kindliness, virtue, unselfish devotion and parental love--that we associate with ideal motherhood.

The Democratic party has a big job ahead even for the inexhaustible President Lyndon B. Johnson.

It began Thursday night -- Texas size -- with the unveiling of the 1966 fund raising campaign. President Johnson attended a fund raising President's Club ball in Houston.

Anyone willing to part with $1,000 can join the President's club.

Membership privileges include occasional briefings by cabinet members, a presidential handshake or autographed picture and the possibility of being invited to a White House reception.

Speeches at club gatherings are brief and informal.

The technique works well.

President John F. Kennedy organized a club five years ago to help meet his 1960 campaign deficit. The club became the Democrats' chief source of financial support.

In the 1964 campaign gifts of $500 or more accounted for 69 per cent of all money entering party coffers.

The Democrats hope to raise $6 million by November--$2 million to liquidate the 1964 campaign debt, $4 million to help elect this year's candidates for state and national office.

The number of President's club functions is a closely guarded secret if it is in fact known.

But the President has his work cut out for him traveling, eating, handshaking and dancing if the party raises $6 million in six months.

Only a superman could do it and for a man occupying the awesome presidential job at the same time, the task calls for working a miracle.

NEW YORK AP -- Are you forging ahead in life's rat race?

Or are you just a treadmill mouse that has fallen behind?

Surprisingly, many people don't know for sure.

It isn't always easy to tell. There are, however, certain symbols of status. Here are a few unmistakable signs:

Your wife raises by at least $1 the amount she daily doles out to you as lunch money.

One of the two or three television sets in your home is a color set.

Some of the officials at the bank where you keep your checking account recognize you when you enter. If your account is occasionally overdrawn, they don't make a federal case of it.

At quitting time you don't have to tote home a briefcase stuffed with newspapers just to prove how hard you are working.

Instead of talking about office problems, the boss likes to chat with you about his golf scores.

If you don't have an office of your own, at least your desk is by a window with a nice view.

The senior vice president hates you and regards you as a conniving young whippersnapper.

All the other ambitious guys your age in the office secretly dislike you, too, although they try to be publicly palsy-walsy.

When you pause to compliment your pastor after his Sunday sermon, he pats you on the arm as he shakes hands.

If the firm buys a table at a public dinner, you and your wife get your tickets weeks ahead of the event--not the day before after some other executive decides he can't make it.

You have become so important that no one else in the organization any longer can steal your ideas without at least giving you credit for them.

The boss's wife confides to your wife what an old meanier her husband is around the home.

You feel free to have a martini at lunch without gulping three packages of mints afterward to kill your breath.

Your wife realizes that you are so tired from making big decisions at the office all day that she doesn't mind going alone to P-TA meetings.

You decide that the college you went to isn't good enough for your children. It doesn't have quite the right standing.

The new friends you make dress better than the old friends you now see less often, but every once in a while you wonder if you really like them as well or trust them as much.

You get paid once a month instead of once a week like the office peons, and the office mails your check directly to your bank.

If you wear bow ties, the office boys start wearing bow ties also.

That's the best of all success signs. When the office boys start imitating you, you know you're a winner.

You Bet Your Life

Praises of the flowering dogwood, national symbol of spring, have been sung by American poets, writers and statesmen since the early days of the republic. . .George Washington planted the snowy-white blossomed tree at Mount Vernon and it still stands today. . .His love of the dogwood is memorialized at Valley Forge, which has 50,000 trees--said to be the most magnificent display in the world. . .Thomas Jefferson also had great affection for the tree and used it in his landscaping of Monticello and the University of Virginia. . .

Such well-known literary figures as Henry David Thoreau, Christropher Morley, Jesse Stuart and A. E. Houseman have paid tribute to the flowering tree. . .To some it is the "bride of spring." To others the "sun" of day and the "moon" of night. . .From Jamestown Island to the Blue Ridge in Virginia, from Memphis to the Great Smokies in Tennessee and from Nashville to Roanoke Island in North Carolina, the drifts of the dogwood are heralded in the literature of the states. . .

The dogwood has been revered since ancient times, when legends grew up explaining its unique beauties. . .According to one tale, the dogwood's snowy blossoms date from the spring day when Pierrot, climbing a ladder to brighten the moon's face with whitewash, accidentally tripped his bucket, spattering the trees below with its contents. . .Another legend holds that the red stains on the tip of each petal date from the memory of blood shed by a beautiful Cherokee princess who was slain by a jealous brave whose suit she had rejected. . .

Give me whipping cream that's old fashioned
And sugar, not spray sweet, in my tea.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Feud Brews Between Labor and Fulbright As They Pressure Him to Probe Soviet - Latin Action.

Washington, D. C.: -- Behind the scenes a quiet but taut duel is being fought between Sen. J. William Fulbright and some mighty powerful legions of President Johnson's camp--the nation's labor leaders.

East is East and West, West. But the union chiefs want the train to meet in the hearing room of Mr. Fulbright's Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

The labor movement's top officials and their own international affairs specialists have been urging the gentleman from Arkansas to take time out of his probes of the Viet Nam conflict and hold "thoroughgoing" hearings into the Communist Tri - Continental Conference held in Havana earlier this year.

Politely, but very indeed, the Senator rejected the written request of the AFL-CIO Executive Council, labor's highest policy - making presidium.

On March 4 the Council's foreign affairs specialist, Jay Lovestone, head of the AFL-CIO's Department of International Affairs, wrote Mr. Fulbright.

The globe - trotting labor man explicitly pointed to a paragraph in the Council's resolution urging the Fulbright committee to conduct "thoroughgoing hearings on the Havana Conference with the aim of enlightening the American people about its sinister aims and to propose constructive measures for defeating the Communist threat to peace and freedom in the Western Hemisphere."

On March 17, it now can be reported, Sen. Fulbright replied to Mr. Lovestone, saying that his committee had a very tough schedule and was quite occupied with the crisis in Asia.

In his letter Mr. Fulbright disclosed that his committee had been in close contact with the Executive Branch and was able to keep up with Communist activity in Latin America.

But, he added, the Committee schedule was so tight that no new matters could be taken on.

To insiders, this meant that Mr. Fulbright had turned down AFL - CIO President George Meany himself since Mr. Lovestone would most definitely not have moved without consulting his equally determined, anti-Communist chief.

Mr. Meany rarely is deflected from any cause or direction to which he is dedicated. Neither is Mr. Fulbright. So it is a matter of the immovable and irresistible again.

What concerns the AFL -CIO is the preparation by the Tri-Continental Communist Organization to hold another conference in Cuba early in 1967.

Not only is the tri-continental network aiming at guerrilla violence in such traditional hot cold - war battlefields as Venezuela and Bolivia, but in Puerto Rico as well.

Support for such action in the U. S.' island commonwealth was pledged to the Conference by the chief Soviet delegate, Sharaf Rashidov, last Jan. 6. Russia, he said, is backing "liberation movements" in Latin America, including Puerto Rico.

Amongst those who cheered were the so - called Puerto Rican delegates. They were headed by one identified as Norman Pietri, frequently quoted around the town as backing the Viet Cong.

Senor Pietri turns out to be a flamboyant speaker, running second to none in his vituperation of the U. S. Billing himself as the spokesman of the Pro-Independence Movement, he sounded, at the Havana conference, like a Lenin - era, politburo, agit - prop (agitation - propaganda) specialist.

An analysis of his major speech to the world Communist movement's tri-continental parley on Jan. 10 has just been made available.

"Comrade President, comrade delegates," says Pietri, "the Puerto Rican delegation, composed of the representatives of the Pro - Independence Movement, expresses fraternal thanks on behalf of our people."

Of course, Senor Pietri did not speak for the intensely loyal Puerto Ricans. But his small group can whip up turbulence. His speech bristled with attacks on the nine U. S. military and naval installations, the berthing of nuclear submarines, airfields, radar and training of special anti - guerrilla troops.

Pietri's long speech sounded ominous. It could be a warning of trouble to come on the prospering and peaceful island -- especially with the next Tri-Continental Organization session due in nine months.

That is why the labor people want public Senate hearings.

The East is boiling. If we don't want the West to start bubbling, now is the time to turn off the heat, say the union men. So behind the scenes they're pouring on some heat of their own -- on the gentleman from Arkansas.

H. L. Hunt Says

CONSTRUCTIVE, 1966,
4TH INSTALLMENT

"Constructive" is noteworthy in that it can be used either as a noun or an adjective. It can become a trademark for the sound and humanity-serving programs in the governmental, social, and economic structure of our nation. It is a word with an innate quality of orderliness and discipline. No one could ever visualize a Constructive lunatic fringe or hope to malign anyone by labeling him "super-constructive."

Patriots who have the reputation of being Conservatives, Liberals, or Constructives will find that, of the three, the title "Constructive" is best. It is a word that instantly calls to mind desirable, productive, enduring qualities.

There should be two opposing sets of principles by title, and "Constructive" and "Liberal" are ideal for meeting this need. Their two thought groups may be described as follows:

Liberal -- Those who stress privileges for the masses; holds human rights superior to property rights; stand for progress unhampered by tradition for social gains, for paternalistic government, and associated and similar objectives.

Constructive -- Those who stress freedom and individual initiative, property rights as requisite to real human rights, the incentive system, productive action, human dignity, protection from governmental monopoly and associated objectives.

A Constructive can embrace such Liberal policies as he finds acceptable. A Liberal can always be as Constructive as his progressive policies will permit. As for a "Moderate" or a "Middle-of-the-Roader," he is usually trying to be all things to all people and lacks the courage of his convictions to make a choice between Constructive and Liberal doctrines.

The pressing need is for a name that stands out as the best for describing the philosophy that calls for promoting progress, insuring freedom, national sovereignty, independence and fostering liberty and peace through strength.

Some may ask, "What's in a name?" The truthful answer can be, "The difference." HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Dr. Philip Lee, a two - fisted physician who has brought new life to the department of health, education, and welfare as assistant secretary, is planning to shake off the dust and ruffle the papers of various reports inside his department which cost the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars but have scarcely seen the light of day.

Particularly he is planning to reform HEW's system of giving universities grants to investigate automobile safety and then permitting the reports to be hushed up.

Last week this column reported that half a dozen or so reports on auto safety has been suppressed by Leon Goldstein, chief of Grants Research in HEW's division of accident prevention.

Dr. Lee plans to specify that when a university or any individual gets a government research grant, the contract shall set a deadline for completion of the work and that its results shall be made public.

In the past, various reports on auto safety were stalled. When researchers asked universities for the results of their work -- results which cost the taxpayers several hundred thousand dollars -- they were referred back to HEW. And When HEW was queried, the inquiries were referred back to the university.

Dr. Lee wants to end this merry-go-round.

LEGAL EAGLE

The smartest thing the Detroit motor moguls did in the auto safety hearings was to hire Lloyd Cutler as their attorney. Cutler is a close friend of Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor, who will be entrusted with enforcing the safety standards if and when congress writes them. Connor thought so highly of Cutler that he wanted to appoint him under secretary of commerce.

However, there was too much opposition, due to his representation of powerful big business clients, particularly the drug industry and the Swiss Interhandel Cartel. It was Cutler's skillful maneuvering on behalf of the drug companies, including Merck and Company, which succeeded in pulling the teeth of the Kefauver Drug Bill. Secretary Connor at that time was head of Merck and Company, one of those who retained Cutler.

Interhandel was the Swiss company which took over the assets of General Aniline and Film, the American counterpart of the Nazi Cartel I. G. Farben. The justice department in the past had branded Interhandel as a blind for the Nazis, but Cutler helped persuade Bobby Kennedy, then attorney general, to negotiate a deal which sent $100 million to the Swiss blind.

Immediately after the automobile industry retained Cutler, its image began to improve in Washington.

Working late at night over the weekend, Cutler persuaded the automobile industry to change its tactics and not oppose the administration's auto safety bill head-on. He advised an oblique attack instead. This was why the industry was credited with a "U turn" in accepting federal safety standards.

Actually this was not the case. What happened was that Cutler got the motor moguls to agree to the idea of having secretary of commerce -- at the moment John Connor, a former General Motors director -- as the man who would enforce safety standards. But Cutler turned around and proposed so many amendments against too much federal safety control that Connor, friendly as he is, will not have much authority. After all, Connor won't be in the job forever.

SAFETY-BUT WHEN?

Here are the gimmicks which Cutler proposed for the auto safety bill:

AMENDMENT NO. 1 -- Was "Delay." The automobile makers could appeal to the U.S. District Court, then to the appeals court, then to the supreme court, under Cutler's plan, if they don't like safety rulings by the secretary of commerce.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 -- Cutler proposed that the new auto safety law stretch the two - year limit for the auto industry to make design changes.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 -- Cutler has concocted a new formula for safety standards. In addition to reasonableness and practicality, he would add "cost" and whether the safety changes were "within present engineering and manufacturing art."

AMENDMENT NO. 4 -- Cutler conceived the idea of changing the proposed fine of $1,000 per vehicle, to be assessed against the motor industry for safety failure, to a total of $100,000. This is a drastic reduction, since a fine of $1,000 per vehicle could run into millions of dollars.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 -- Cutler introduced the idea of safety participation by the states. The states have a very diverse and confusing system of enforcing automobile safety, with many states having no such machinery at all. To consult the states would definitely nullify federal attempts to automobile safety.

Chief aim of the Cutler amendments is to create machinery for enforcing safety by the automobile industry, not by the U. S. government.

Note -- Secretary Connor delivered a recent speech lauding the automobile industry on safety, despite the fact that it has now called back thousands of cars to adjust defects, and despite the fact that General Motors hounded the young man who pointed to these defects, Ralph Nader, even placing a private detective on his trail.

Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson have been batting out so many important exclusive stores these days that we have had a hard time keep you up to date.

We are sure you are familiar with the series of victories they have scored through the column's revelation re Sen. Tom Dodd of Connecticut. This was climaxed on April 28 by internal revenue's announcement that it would investigate Dodd's two testimonial dinners netting $100,000, which Pearson and Anderson reported went to Dodd's private bank account.

On top of this, the Senate Ethics committee announced April 29 that it will hold public hearings on the first phase of the Dodd columns, namely Dodd's connection with a registered foreign agent, Julius Klein.

On other news fronts, Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W. Va., chairman of the House Commerce committee, announced April 26 that he was asking the department of HEW to release all the government research reports on automobile safety which Pearson that morning reported had been suppressed.

On April 27 Tom Mann resigned as deputy under secretary of state. Person had reported on April 18 that Mann was under heavy criticism from Latin American diplomats.

On April 28 the U. S. District Court followed the Pearson revelations that two D. C. painters union bosses, Robert Lowry and John T. Lyons, had criminal records, therefore must get out as head of Washington's district council 51.

On April 29 a federal court finally ratified a settlement of the Hanna mining nickel suit, thereby confirming stories unearthed by Pearson in the early days of the Eisenhower administration, 1954, reporting that the company once dominated by George M. Humphrey, then secretary of the treasury, had been given a contract to produce nickel, with fantastic profits to Hanna.

On April 25 ex-Ambassador John K. Galbraith told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that American arms assistance to India and Pakistan had caused war between the two countries. He was especially critical of arms to Pakistan. This is a point which Pearson has been reporting for the past eight years, culminating with the column on December 27, 1965, in which he gave figures on the number of Patton tanks which India had captured from Pakistan despite a Pakistani pledge to the United States that the tanks would not be used against India.

On March 20, 1966, Pearson published a private letter written by Miss Frances Knight head of the state department's passport office, in which she enclosed a copy of a speech drafted for the Republicans for use in the 1952 campaign between Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson. In the speech she referred to Stevenson as "glib, country club edition of Harry Truman," who used "the slickest diversionary tactics at his command to avoid the issue of Communism." Miss Knight was then working for the Truman administration.

The Pearson revelation has been the subject of widespread comment.

On February 7, 1966, the Washington merry-go-round revealed a bomb shortage in Viet Nam. This has been the subject of senate comment and a recent congressional investigation.

This is some of the news ahead of the news which Pearson and Anderson have been giving you of late.

On the Set With 'The King and I'

By Thedamay Cleek

I want to pay tribute to the "unsung heroes" of "The King and I." These are the persons who are very much in the play but who are not seen by the audience and will not receive "curtain calls."

Without their help, a play could not go on. The ones who work out the lighting effects, David Entrekin, (Chairman), Carroll Couch, Carolyn Hill, Terry Johnson, and Danny Cannon, are invaluable to us.

Then there is the prop crew, Abbie Morrison (Chairman), Ruth and Lyman Dale, Mary Wilkinson, Mary Fussell and Martha Edwards. These are the people who scour the town for items that range all the way from a rug on the floor to a pair of genuine Victorian glasses, loaned by the American Optical Co.

A cast would be very nervous if they knew they had to go on without someone in the wings to prompt them. They are grateful to the prompters; Anna Schumacher, Sandy York, and Linda Pickard.

With a production such as "The Kind and I", with so many groups placed in various parts of the building, it is necessary to have "Cue girls." Zelpha Davis, Dona Wheeler, and Susan Simpson are equipped with walkie-talkies to keep the performers informed of their entrances. They also keep stage crews informed of set changes. They are in contact with the lighting director and the sound man.

Sound, in the charge of Lynn Colley, involves taping and coordinating the various sounds that are needed for backgrounds and special effects. He must always be sure that these sounds are synchronized with the action on stage.

Many people are used backstage to move the sets, clear the stage, re-arrange it and even make repairs on flats and screens if something is damaged during the action. The stage crew includes Harley Barnes, Bernard Kincy, John "Red" Davis, W. W. Wilkinson, Richard Fussell, F. X. Schumacher III, and Ernest Eledge. Many members of the cast also assist, back-stage.

There will be people in the dressing rooms, helping with costume changes, repairing make - up, lining up costumes for the dressers and keeping things in order. One of the best in this department, in the past has been Phyllis Watkins and we will be glad when she can help again.

Anne Rowe, Sikeston Little Theatre board chairman of publicity, has been lending her artistic talent to the creating of some of the exotic props used in the play. Therefore, the job of covering the story of this production has been given me. I'm sure I have not given credit to many people who have lent their time and effort to making "The King and I" a success. These are indeed "unsung" and if I have been remiss, I know they will understand.

I have misspelled names, cast people to the wrong roles, described costumes for the wrong person now and then but all I have told you about will be there and much, much more. I want to thank all the committee members for helping me collect the information needed to write these reports on the progress of this tremendous undertaking by our director, Hope Terrell.

Last but not least in importance is the curtain puller. There was a time when we knew the curtain puller would be "Dr. Tom." Since then, we have taken turnabout at this important task. After all -- this is the man whose action begins and ends the show. And he would like to open to S.R.O. on May 6-7 - 14 at 8 p.m. and May 8 at 2 p.m. at the Junior high school auditorium.

Matthews Club Meets April 28

A pink and white color scheme was used in decorations on the refreshment table which was covered with a pink and white cloth and centered with fresh flower arrangement.

A delicious dessert course was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Burch, Mrs. Ralph Fairies, and Mrs. Frank Stanley.

"Trouble?" said the WAC. "I doubt it. My girls have it up here!" she explained, tapping her temple.

"Ma'am," said the captain, "I don't care where they have it--my men will find it. Restrict 'em!"

On the Set With 'The King and I'

By Thedamay Cleek

I want to pay tribute to the "unsung heroes" of "The King and I." These are the persons who are very much in the play but who are not seen by the audience and will not receive "curtain calls."

Without their help, a play could not go on. The ones who work out the lighting effects, David Entrekin, (Chairman), Carroll Couch, Carolyn Hill, Terry Johnson, and Danny Cannon, are invaluable to us.

Then there is the prop crew, Abbie Morrison (Chairman), Ruth and Lyman Dale, Mary Wilkinson, Mary Fussell and Martha Edwards. These are the people who scour the town for items that range all the way from a rug on the floor to a pair of genuine Victorian glasses, loaned by the American Optical Co.

A cast would be very nervous if they knew they had to go on without someone in the wings to prompt them. They are grateful to the prompters; Anna Schumacher, Sandy York, and Linda Pickard.

With a production such as "The Kind and I", with so many groups placed in various parts of the building, it is necessary to have "Cue girls." Zelpha Davis, Dona Wheeler, and Susan Simpson are equipped with walkie-talkies to keep the performers informed of their entrances. They also keep stage crews informed of set changes. They are in contact with the lighting director and the sound man.

Sound, in the charge of Lynn Colley, involves taping and coordinating the various sounds that are needed for backgrounds and special effects. He must always be sure that these sounds are synchronized with the action on stage.

Many people are used backstage to move the sets, clear the stage, re-arrange it and even make repairs on flats and screens if something is damaged during the action. The stage crew includes Harley Barnes, Bernard Kincy, John "Red" Davis, W. W. Wilkinson, Richard Fussell, F. X. Schumacher III, and Ernest Eledge. Many members of the cast also assist, back-stage.

There will be people in the dressing rooms, helping with costume changes, repairing make - up, lining up costumes for the dressers and keeping things in order. One of the best in this department, in the past has been Phyllis Watkins and we will be glad when she can help again.

Anne Rowe, Sikeston Little Theatre board chairman of publicity, has been lending her artistic talent to the creating of some of the exotic props used in the play. Therefore, the job of covering the story of this production has been given me. I'm sure I have not given credit to many people who have lent their time and effort to making "The King and I" a success. These are indeed "unsung" and if I have been remiss, I know they will understand.

I have misspelled names, cast people to the wrong roles, described costumes for the wrong person now and then but all I have told you about will be there and much, much more. I want to thank all the committee members for helping me collect the information needed to write these reports on the progress of this tremendous undertaking by our director, Hope Terrell.

Last but not least in importance is the curtain puller. There was a time when we knew the curtain puller would be "Dr. Tom." Since then, we have taken turnabout at this important task. After all -- this is the man whose action begins and ends the show. And he would like to open to S.R.O. on May 6-7 - 14 at 8 p.m. and May 8 at 2 p.m. at the Junior high school auditorium.

Matthews Club Meets April 28

MATTHEWS -- Lighting in the Home" was the topic for the program given by Mrs. Marcus Koch when the Matthews Community Club met Wednesday evening, April 28, at the community center.

Charter members of the club will be guests of honor at a potluck supper on May 25 at the home of Mrs. Wallace Waters.

A pink and white color scheme was used in decorations on the refreshment table which was covered with a pink and white cloth and centered with fresh flower arrangement.

A delicious dessert course was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Burch, Mrs. Ralph Fairies, and Mrs. Frank Stanley.

After six long weeks of hard field duty at an isolated Army training area, our unit returned to home base (at Fort Hood, Texas) across the street from a WAC detachment.

Our CO, a captain, paid a visit on the WAC's and cautioned the WAC commanding officer to keep her girls restricted after duty hours. "Or else," warned our captain, "there's bound to be some trouble."

"Trouble?" said the WAC. "I doubt it. My girls have it up here!" she explained, tapping her temple.

"Ma'am," said the captain, "I don't care where they have it--my men will find it. Restrict 'em!"

Dogs Streak Past Jackson 9-1

Behind the four-hit pitching of staff ace, Dar Kern, the mighty Sikeston Bulldogs swept past visiting Jackson here yesterday afternoon 9-1, for their sixth win in seven starts.

Kern, the Bulldogs fireball specialist was never in any serious trouble as he was backed up by some fine hitting and four runs in the first inning.

The game started out with Bill Lewis, of Jackson bouncing one past second base for a hit and was followed by Ron Myer who sacrificed to center field moving Lewis to second and bringing up Keith Dunn who struck out and Lewis was caught at third base trying to steal for the last out of the inning.

The Bulldogs caught fire in the first inning, pushing across four runs on three hits with the leadoff batter Richard Montgomery reaching first base on balls, Limbaugh followed with a single, Garner walked loading the bases, Mankley struck out and Couch singled driving in a run and was followed by Ramsey who doubled driving in three runs and was out trying to take third on the play. Bailey ended the inning grounding out to the short stop.

Kern had an easy go of it the rest of the game as the ace hurler had three up and three down in the second, and had to pitch to only five extra batters the rest of the game.

The Bulldogs continued their domination of the game in the second inning as they collected three runs on four hits. Ellison, Kern, Limbaugh, and Manley collected the hits for the Dogs as they slacked off the rest of the game and collected only two hits and two runs.

The Jackson Indians collected their only run in the seventh inning with Ron Ashman starting off the inning with a single. Dane Crader reached first base on an error by the left fielder, and was followed by Randy Speck who grounded into a double play, moving Ashman to third and Tom Hinklebine lined a single scoring Ashman for the Indians only run. Bill Lewis ended the game flying out to center field.

Mays Ends 10 Day Search For 512th

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie Mays broke Mel Ott's National League Home run record by hitting No. 512 Wednesday night.

Ending a 10-day search for the record-breaker, Mays found the range in the fifth inning and surpassed Ott by tagging a pitch from Claude Osteen over the right field fence for his seventh homer of the season and 512th of his career.

Oddly, it was the first homer of the season by Mays that did not tie or win a game for the San Francisco Giants, who held a 4-1 lead en route to a 6-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers when the $125,000-a-year center fielder brought the crowd to its feet.

Although it didn't count as far as winning the game, it got Mays a two-minute standing ovation from the Candlestick Park crowd of 28,220, it ended a seven-game drought in which Mays hadn't driven in a run and it ended a string of 96 innings in which Osteen had not allowed a homer.

Mays, however, will have nothing to show for it, except a line in the record book. He got his cake, but didn't eat it. And he got his ball, but couldn't keep it.

The ball was retrieved by Henry Garron Jr., 17, of Oakland, Calif., but his father didn't want to part with it.

"I was offered $100 and I think it was worth more," Garron said.

But he still asked Mays to autograph it, and Mays did, remarking:

"Be my guest and keep it."

Mays gave scant notice to the cake supplied for the occasion, a yellow cake with "512" written on in white frosting. He didn't spot it until after he had showered, and it went untouched.

"That thing must have been here a week," Mays quipped.

Mays probably will pass two more goals this season. He figures to climb above both Ted Williams, who hit 521 homers, and Jimmy Foxx, who hit 534, before the season ends.

That would leave only one more target -- Babe Ruth and his 714 homers.

While Mays provided the hitting excitement, Jack Hamilton of the New York Mets provided the pitching excitement by allowing only one hit in an 8-0 victory at St. Louis--a bunt single by opposing pitcher Ray Sadecki in the third inning.

Elsewhere, Chris Short pitched a two-hitter in Philadelphia's 2-1 victory over Atlanta, Houston's Robin Roberts shut out the Chicago Cubs 4-0 on seven hits and Pittsburgh edged Cincinnati 4-3.

Even though Mays stole the show at Candlestick, Joe Gibbon made an impressive first start for the Giants by setting the Dodgers down on four hits.

Osteen was in trouble before Mays tagged his homer, helping San Francisco to three unearned runs in a four-run second inning. He hit Jim Hart, allowed a single by Orlando Cepeda and then threw away Jesus Alou's bouncer for one run. Hal Lanier singled home another and Jim Davenport followed with a two-run single.

Hamilton, bringing his record to 3-1, surrendered his only hit when Sadecki laid a two-out bunt down the third base line and beat Ken Boyer's throw to first. The 26-year-old right-hander, purchased from Detroit during the off-season, struck out six, walked only one and allowed only two balls hit out of the infield.

Ron Swoboda and Ed Bressoud gave Hamilton all the support he needed by slamming homers.

Short was touched for both hits by Denis Menke, who singled to center in the fifth inning and hit a homer in the eighth. The Phillie southpaw struck out five and walked two in bringing his record to 3-1.

Tony Gonzalez provided the first Phillie run with a homer in the second inning off Ken Johnson and the other came across on consecutive fourth inning singles by Dick Groat, Bill White and John Callison.

Roberts, winning his second in a row after three losses, brought the Astros their fourth straight victory. Joe Morgan singled in the first run and Dave Nicholson took care of the other three with a homer off Dick Ellsworth.

Bob Bailey homered for the Pirates first run in the third inning before they pushed across three unearned fourth inning runs with the aid of two errors by Reds' third baseman Pete Rose.

Two Homers By Scott Lifts Red Sox To Win

By HAL BROCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

"Great Scott," exclaimed Manager Billy Herman when he saw the rookie infielder sporting an ascot on a spring training trip.

So George Scott discarded the neckwear, but not the nickname.

Scott, Boston's dapper young first baseman, took over the American League home run lead Wednesday night with his sixth and seventh of the season as the as the Red Sox blanked Detroit 7-0 on Earl Wilson's two-hitter.

It was just that kind of slugging that earned Scott a starting job during spring training.

Scott drove in five runs with his two homers as the Red Sox won their fifth game and third against Detroit this season.

Elsewhere, Fred Whitfield's ninth inning homer gave Cleveland a 2-1 decision over New York in a game in which Indians' shortstop Larry Brown suffered a fractured skull when he collided with teammate Leon Wagner going after a fly ball.

Washington whipped Baltimore 3-2, Minnesota rocked Chicago 6-1 and California ripped Kansas City 13-2 in other games.

Scott's first homer followed one by Wilson in the fifth inning.

In the ninth, Scott hammered his second homer of the night, just missing the left field roof with a long drive.

Whitfield, the Yankees' No. 1 nemesis, beat New York with a homer for the third time this season. The veteran first baseman, who played under New York Manager Johnny Keane when Keane managed the St. Louis Cardinals, has punished Yankee pitching for 13 homers in the last two seasons.

Brown and Wagner collided in the fourth inning chasing Roger Maris' blooper. Brown was reported in serious condition at Lenox Hill Hospital where examination revealed a fractured skull, fractured nose and fractured cheekbone.

Wagner suffered a broken nose.

The Senators, who ended Baltimore's 10-game winning streak Tuesday, beat the Orioles again with three pitchers combining for a five hitter.

Relievers Dick Lines and Ron Kline permitted just three hits over the last 5 2/3 innings after starter Jim Duckworth was forced to leave the game with a back injury in the fourth inning.

Minnesota scored three runs on one hit in the first inning and went on to beat Chicago as Jim Kaat scattered nine White Sox hits.

Don Mincher's double following an error and a walk produced two runs and then Don Buford's throwing error brought Mincher home with the third run for the Twins.

Bob Rodgers whacked four hits and Norm Siebern and Jack Warner drove in two runs apiece as the Angels racked Kansas City, Dean Chance pitched a six-hitter and the Angels battered three Athletic pitchers for 17 hits.

Cleveland Player Injured In Game

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK AP -- Larry Brown, Cleveland's shortstop, was under intensive care in Lenox Hill Hospital today after suffering a fractured skull, fractured nose and fractured right cheek bone in a collision with teammate Leon Wagner at Yankee Stadium.

Wagner also is hospitalized with a broken nose and facial bruises.

It was the second bitter blow to the Brown family within a period of three months. Dick Brown, Larry's older brother and a catcher with Baltimore, underwent surgery for removal of a brain tumor two months ago.

Roger Maris lifted a high fly ball down the line in left field in the fourth inning of the Indians' 2-1 victory. Brown tore back after the ball and Wagner charged in from left on collision course. The 160-pound Brown and the 200-pound outfielder met head on. Both sprawled on the ground as the ball fell safely for a double.

It is feared Brown might be lost for months and possibly the rest of the season. Wagner is due back in a day or two.

They carried the 26-year-old Brown off the field on a stretcher after trainer Wally Bockpried open his mouth to keep him from choking on his blood. Wagner walked off under his own power but accompanied Brown to the hospital for an overnight stay and X rays. Both had been knocked out on the field.

"It was one of those plays nobody could call," said a dazed Wagner in the clubhouse as he mopped blood from a cut on the bridge of his nose. "I saw Brown. It didn't look like he could catch it so I put on a burst of speed. When the ball went up I knew it had to be caught. It was one of those split second plays that you can't call a man off on.

North Pemiscot To Visit Bulldogs

Sikeston's mighty Bulldogs will meet the North Pemiscot Mustangs this afternoon in the first round game of the state high school baseball tournament at VFW park.

The winner of this contest will meet the winner of the Doniphan district at Campbell later this month.

North Pemiscot, currently on a six game winning streak, has lost only 2 games this year. The Dogs sport a 7-1 win-loss record. The Dogs' pitching staff sports one no-hitter and a one-hitter in their victory column.

The Mustangs won over Parma, Hayti and Campbell to advance into the game with the Dogs and have been guided by fine pitching by two ace right handers.

In an attempt to tame the wild Mustangs, the Bulldogs will place a hard throwing right hander against them, Gary Stallings, who has been credited with a one hitter in the district tourney, and the win was against the rough Bloomfield Wildcats. Rudy Manley showed fine relief pitching Monday as he was tapped for only one hit in six innings and will back up the ace hurler Stallings.

Leading the Mustangs hitting attack will be two fine sluggers who have combined for a total of 22 hits in leading their team to the first round game of the state gournament.

The Bulldogs will have the edge with the power as the Mustangs are not known for their hitting but are known for their fine defensive play and capitalize on opponents mistakes.

Dogs Streak Past Jackson 9-1

Behind the four-hit pitching of staff ace, Dar Kern, the mighty Sikeston Bulldogs swept past visiting Jackson here yesterday afternoon 9-1, for their sixth win in seven starts.

Kern, the Bulldogs fireball specialist was never in any serious trouble as he was backed up by some fine hitting and four runs in the first inning.

The game started out with Bill Lewis, of Jackson bouncing one past second base for a hit and was followed by Ron Myer who sacrificed to center field moving Lewis to second and bringing up Keith Dunn who struck out and Lewis was caught at third base trying to steal for the last out of the inning.

The Bulldogs caught fire in the first inning, pushing across four runs on three hits with the leadoff batter Richard Montgomery reaching first base on balls, Limbaugh followed with a single, Garner walked loading the bases, Mankley struck out and Couch singled driving in a run and was followed by Ramsey who doubled driving in three runs and was out trying to take third on the play. Bailey ended the inning grounding out to the short stop.

Kern had an easy go of it the rest of the game as the ace hurler had three up and three down in the second, and had to pitch to only five extra batters the rest of the game.

The Bulldogs continued their domination of the game in the second inning as they collected three runs on four hits. Ellison, Kern, Limbaugh, and Manley collected the hits for the Dogs as they slacked off the rest of the game and collected only two hits and two runs.

The Jackson Indians collected their only run in the seventh inning with Ron Ashman starting off the inning with a single. Dane Crader reached first base on an error by the left fielder, and was followed by Randy Speck who grounded into a double play, moving Ashman to third and Tom Hinklebine lined a single scoring Ashman for the Indians only run. Bill Lewis ended the game flying out to center field.

Mays Ends 10 Day Search For 512th

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie Mays broke Mel Ott's National League Home run record by hitting No. 512 Wednesday night.

Ending a 10-day search for the record-breaker, Mays found the range in the fifth inning and surpassed Ott by tagging a pitch from Claude Osteen over the right field fence for his seventh homer of the season and 512th of his career.

Oddly, it was the first homer of the season by Mays that did not tie or win a game for the San Francisco Giants, who held a 4-1 lead en route to a 6-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers when the $125,000-a-year center fielder brought the crowd to its feet.

Although it didn't count as far as winning the game, it got Mays a two-minute standing ovation from the Candlestick Park crowd of 28,220, it ended a seven-game drought in which Mays hadn't driven in a run and it ended a string of 96 innings in which Osteen had not allowed a homer.

Mays, however, will have nothing to show for it, except a line in the record book. He got his cake, but didn't eat it. And he got his ball, but couldn't keep it.

The ball was retrieved by Henry Garron Jr., 17, of Oakland, Calif., but his father didn't want to part with it.

"I was offered $100 and I think it was worth more," Garron said.

But he still asked Mays to autograph it, and Mays did, remarking:

"Be my guest and keep it."

Mays gave scant notice to the cake supplied for the occasion, a yellow cake with "512" written on in white frosting. He didn't spot it until after he had showered, and it went untouched.

"That thing must have been here a week," Mays quipped.

Mays probably will pass two more goals this season. He figures to climb above both Ted Williams, who hit 521 homers, and Jimmy Foxx, who hit 534, before the season ends.

That would leave only one more target -- Babe Ruth and his 714 homers.

While Mays provided the hitting excitement, Jack Hamilton of the New York Mets provided the pitching excitement by allowing only one hit in an 8-0 victory at St. Louis--a bunt single by opposing pitcher Ray Sadecki in the third inning.

Elsewhere, Chris Short pitched a two-hitter in Philadelphia's 2-1 victory over Atlanta, Houston's Robin Roberts shut out the Chicago Cubs 4-0 on seven hits and Pittsburgh edged Cincinnati 4-3.

Even though Mays stole the show at Candlestick, Joe Gibbon made an impressive first start for the Giants by setting the Dodgers down on four hits.

Osteen was in trouble before Mays tagged his homer, helping San Francisco to three unearned runs in a four-run second inning. He hit Jim Hart, allowed a single by Orlando Cepeda and then threw away Jesus Alou's bouncer for one run. Hal Lanier singled home another and Jim Davenport followed with a two-run single.

Hamilton, bringing his record to 3-1, surrendered his only hit when Sadecki laid a two-out bunt down the third base line and beat Ken Boyer's throw to first. Nader Ticking No One Knows Why Though

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON AP -- Ralph Nader, one of the greatest pains in the neck the automobile industry ever encountered, has put in years analyzing the problem of safety in American cars but not much time analyzing himself.

As few ever have, this tall, gangling, unmarried, 32-year-old lawyer has helped light a fire under Congress and the automakers with his criticism of the latter and his crusade for safer cars.

He has done it with his book, "Unsafe At Any Speed," which hasn't made him a fortune, and his statements before Congress and groups anxious to hear his attacks.

This year Congress may pass a law laying down federal safety standards and requirements such as have never been imposed on the industry. The automakers finally thought this might be worthwhile although a few weeks before they didn't.

Nader is not only not a mechanic, he doesn't own a car. He has gathered his information from various sources, like studies and engineering reports. He often goes sleepless to do research and prepare his next day's statements.

The night before last, getting ready to appear before a congressional committee Wednesday he didn't sleep at all. And when he arrived he had such a bundle of material he needed both arms to carry it.

Nader, a graduate of Princeton and Harvard Law School, gave up a law practice to devote himself full time to this cause. Why? What makes him tick? What's the motivation behind this use of his life for this crusade?

Ask him, and he's a little blank. He relishes the question. He grins and rubs his head and makes a hasty expedition back through his life to childhood in search of the answer. He can't be sure. He can only guess.

And his guess is vague. He thinks his parents, Lebanese with a restaurant in Winsted, Conn., were an influence but he can't say how. He knows he always felt people should do good for one another.

He called it public service. It didn't involve making money. For some reason, trying to explain, he thought of the dignity of man and the time he was four years old in the Eastern Orthodox Church his family attended.

He was in line with a lot of other boys, waiting to go up and kiss the bishop's hand, and he didn't want to because he thought it was an indignity to him. Beyond that he seemed at a loss for his motivation about safe cars.

Except for this: He said "I have been interested in auto safety ever since my school days when I saw too much blood on the highway." The auto industry's reaction to him hasn't been exactly warm.

Henry Ford II, head of the Ford Motor Co., said that if Nader was a good engineer he could have a job at Ford but "Frankly, I don't think he knows very much about automobiles."

And General Motors had private detectives investigate his life. Nader testified that after his book was published gumshoes followed him, quizzed his friends and old college acquaintances about his sex life, asking whether he was anti-Semitic and if he belonged to any left-wing groups. They found nothing against him.

And on an extraordinary day, James M. Roche, president of General Motors, apologized before a Senate committee for the sleuthing, explaining it was to find out if Nader had any connection with damage claims against GM.

Nader had traveled a lot overseas, writing about problems he saw, and then came home to concentrate on automobiles, believing, he said, he couldn't solve foreign problems but might help solve some at home.

He has other projects in mind when this is finished but won't disclose them. One friend said of him:

"The good thing about what he is doing is that it shows the individual counts and can get things done. The old saying about individual effort--'you can't fight city hall' -- didn't count in his case."

Business Looking Good, Worries Brokers

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK AP -- Business is looking so good that Wall Street is worried. Stock traders are edgy lest business is looking too good. But many businessmen are inclined to think the stock market is flunking as a barometer.

Stock traders' fears are two-sided. First, the unexpected size of the economy's advance in the first three months of the year may have fired business and consumer confidence to the overheating stage. Or second, the big spurt in prices and profits may beef up labor's demands and also encourage taxes in an election year.

Businessmen and bankers are cautioning that it's too early yet to be sure of either of these outcomes. They note that the business spurt this year is far from universal and the pace is irregular. They point to some weaknesses, or at least slowdowns, that are beginning to appear.

These prophets of caution cite a slackening of late in the rate of new orders in the steel industry and the 5 per cent lag in new car sales this April from a year ago. Housing starts for the year are well below previous rates. And leading corporations have announced cuts in their spending plans this year for expansion and modernization.

The nation's purchasing agents have told their association they see this quarter as hitting the peak pace for 1966--with leveling off starting at midyear.

Early this week, however, stock traders were concentrating more on the threats of government intervention to cool down a boom that had grown hotter than expected. And most of the news reports added to their nervousness.

Further expansion of the economy, at least through the current quarter, is all but taken for granted.

Three Networks Have News Duplication

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK AP -- CBS' news division under its president Richard S. Salant, wants to do something constructive about the fierce three-network competition that sometimes duplicates coverage of the same stories.

Salant spoke Wednesday to a conference of representatives of the network's affiliated stations.

He recalled his "serious reservations" about the opening to closing coverage of political conventions by all three networks two years ago, including what he called "all the trivia and fill--the endless nominations of favorite sons and seconding speeches, the unspontaneous spontaneous demonstrations and so on and so on ad nauseum."

He said Wednesday that it is time to reconsider this coverage in terms of "journalistic function" -- edited reports of meaningful events--instead of sheer quantity and hours of focusing on the story as it occurs.

He proposes now to apply editorial judgment to coverage of the May 17 flight of Gemini 9. Barring emergencies, CBS will reduce sharply the amount of network time given to the flight, but will break in for short periods to cover important events--the launching, docking in space, an astronaut's walk in space. And then it will cover the return of the capsule.

"Man's ascent into space is no longer unprecedented nor is each mission so extraordinary," he said. A space journey, he said, once the rocket is in orbit is a second hand story passed along by the space agency which can be seen neither by television reporters nor caught by the cameras.

It is perhaps inevitable that some network would ultimately move in this direction. It has been slow in coming largely--again in Salant's words--"for competitive reasons, or for public relations reasons or to polish up our image, whatever that means."

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has appointed Bill James Evans, 36, as second assistant general counsel of the Missouri Public Service Commission, it was reported today.

Evans, a native of Cape Girardeau, will get his law degree Friday. He already holds a degree in chemical engineering. He formerly worked as a technician for the National Lead Co., Fredericktown, Mo.

OUTDOOR DRINKING FOUNTAIN KEEPS YOUNGSTERS OUT OF THE KITCHEN

Before you know it, summer will be here. Then the endless patter of little feet treking into the kitchen for a drink of water begins.

Children always promise not to track in dirt or wake up baby by banging the door, but somehow they forget. Besides, their little friends need drinks of water too, and whoever heard of a group of children all remembering to wipe their feet or close the door quietly?

What's the answer? For a growing number of young families, it's an outdoor drinking fountain, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. Many families who enjoy outdoor living--and this includes those who have no youngsters -- have water conveniences installed on the patio. They consist of a fountain, hot and cold water and an entertainment sink, with storage space beneath for charcoal and other barbecue equipment.

Outdoor water makes food preparation easier, and it simplifies the clean-up job after a meal. The cost of the installation is less than you might think, the Bureau says. A plumbing contractor will be glad to give you an estimate.

Nader Ticking No One Knows Why Though

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON AP -- Ralph Nader, one of the greatest pains in the neck the automobile industry ever encountered, has put in years analyzing the problem of safety in American cars but not much time analyzing himself.

As few ever have, this tall, gangling, unmarried, 32-year-old lawyer has helped light a fire under Congress and the automakers with his criticism of the latter and his crusade for safer cars.

He has done it with his book, "Unsafe At Any Speed," which hasn't made him a fortune, and his statements before Congress and groups anxious to hear his attacks.

This year Congress may pass a law laying down federal safety standards and requirements such as have never been imposed on the industry. The automakers finally thought this might be worthwhile although a few weeks before they didn't.

Nader is not only not a mechanic, he doesn't own a car. He has gathered his information from various sources, like studies and engineering reports. He often goes sleepless to do research and prepare his next day's statements.

The night before last, getting ready to appear before a congressional committee Wednesday he didn't sleep at all. And when he arrived he had such a bundle of material he needed both arms to carry it.

Nader, a graduate of Princeton and Harvard Law School, gave up a law practice to devote himself full time to this cause. Why? What makes him tick? What's the motivation behind this use of his life for this crusade?

Ask him, and he's a little blank. He relishes the question. He grins and rubs his head and makes a hasty expedition back through his life to childhood in search of the answer. He can't be sure. He can only guess.

And his guess is vague. He thinks his parents, Lebanese with a restaurant in Winsted, Conn., were an influence but he can't say how. He knows he always felt people should do good for one another.

He called it public service. It didn't involve making money. For some reason, trying to explain, he thought of the dignity of man and the time he was four years old in the Eastern Orthodox Church his family attended.

He was in line with a lot of other boys, waiting to go up and kiss the bishop's hand, and he didn't want to because he thought it was an indignity to him. Beyond that he seemed at a loss for his motivation about safe cars.

Except for this: He said "I have been interested in auto safety ever since my school days when I saw too much blood on the highway." The auto industry's reaction to him hasn't been exactly warm.

Henry Ford II, head of the Ford Motor Co., said that if Nader was a good engineer he could have a job at Ford but "Frankly, I don't think he knows very much about automobiles."

And General Motors had private detectives investigate his life. Nader testified that after his book was published gumshoes followed him, quizzed his friends and old college acquaintances about his sex life, asking whether he was anti-Semitic and if he belonged to any left-wing groups. They found nothing against him.

And on an extraordinary day, James M. Roche, president of General Motors, apologized before a Senate committee for the sleuthing, explaining it was to find out if Nader had any connection with damage claims against GM.

Nader had traveled a lot overseas, writing about problems he saw, and then came home to concentrate on automobiles, believing, he said, he couldn't solve foreign problems but might help solve some at home.

He has other projects in mind when this is finished but won't disclose them. One friend said of him:

"The good thing about what he is doing is that it shows the individual counts and can get things done. The old saying about individual effort--'you can't fight city hall' -- didn't count in his case."

THIS EMPTY house belonging to J. W. Wooten, Luther Street, was destroyed by fire shortly before noon Tuesday in an unusual way. He was in the process of tearing down the house, and had burned two tree stumps in front of the home. While dismantling the front porch, it fell to the ground and caught fire. Firemen Leonard Overby and Odis Parks are shown putting out the final blaze on the north side.

Paul Flowers' Greenhouse

From a new book "The District of Columbia From Its Glorious Past to the Present," by Allan Carpenter, published by Children's Press, I glean these toothsome fragments:

The White House light bill is going down despite President Johnson's concern over turning out electric lights.

Compared to what lights used to cost at the White House, today's light bill is a pittance. Before a central lighting system was installed in the nation's capital, an evening's entertainment by the President in one White House room -- the East Room -- required $100 worth of candles. And the White House has 132 rooms.

Washington shoppers today would be startled beyond measure to see President Johnson in a supermarket. But, in simpler days, shoppers thought nothing of meeting President William Henry Harrison with a basket doing the White House marketing.

The National Zoological Park is one of the finest zoos anywhere. It has Mohini-- the only white tiger on the public display in the world.

Beneath the Capital rotunda is a crypt and under this a tomb, intended to be the last resting place of George Washington. Because the family would not permit his body to be moved from Mt. Vernon, the tomb has never been used, except to hold the simple black funeral bier on which caskets have rested in state in the rotunda.

Bean soup has been on the House of Representatives menu since 1904 when Speaker Joe Cannon, decreed, "From now on -- hot or cold, rain, snow, or shine -- I want it on the menu every day." It has been on the Senate menu by decision of the Rules Committee every day since 1907.

The Federal Government in Washington today is almost 2,000 times as large as when it moved from Philadelphia in the summer of 1800. There were only 130 clerks in the entire Government force then.

One hundred years ago there were 7,000 Government employes in Washington. Today, there are close to 250,000--more than 35 times as many as under President Lincoln. One third of all people now employed in the Washington area work for the Government.

"The Agriculture Building has the most unusual history of all Government buildings" writes Mr. Carpenter. "Longtime Agriculture Secretary James 'Tama Jim' Wilson knew that the money appropriated by Congress for the new building was not enough. Instead of complaining, he had plans made for a much larger building, and had the two wings of this building constructed leaving a gaping hole in the middle.

"Wilson was one of the most able dealers with Congress in the country's history. When Congress inquired about the unsightly hole in the ground, Wilson calmly replied in his Scotch brogue, 'Ye kenna let it stand like that; 'twod be a national disgrace.' The needed money was appropriated and the rest of the building built."

The nine - million-ton Capitol dome rotates three to four inches every day. As the sun's warmth moves around the dome, it causes it to expand and rotate -- first south, then southwest, and west. And, as the retiring sun declines and disappears, it moves north, northeast, and east - finally returning to its original position.

Commercial Appeal

FUTURE

When we use the word FUTURE, do we imply more than the tomorrows of the present life? I think we must if we expect ever to find any explanation for present imperfections, inequalities and apparent inconsistencies.

It would be difficult to reconcile oneself to the injustices we think we see in ths world if we could not anticipate the coming of a time when we will see things in proper focus.

Food Supplies Increase For Mothers' Day

By SALLY RYAN

NEW YORK AP -- It looks like a bright Mothers' Day weekend in the nation's food stores.

Supplies of many fresh vegetables and fruits have increased.

Best of all, beef, pork and egg prices are creeping down.

Prices of sliced bacon, cured hams and fresh pork butts are down as much as 4 cents a pound on the West Coast, and choice grade steer rounds, loins, ribs and chucks are headed down.

Eggs are down 1 to 10 cents a dozen. They may drop further the next month or so, but they are likely to go up later this summer.

Poultry prices have been higher than a year ago -- about 4 cents a pound for fryers. Many stores already are featuring specials on turkeys.

Fair weather in the Corn Belt cut the number of pigs moving to market this week, raising packers' prices. Pork supplies are down 2 to 4 per cent from last spring, but much better than they were last winter. Retail prices may edge up this summer, but barring an unexpected spurt in demand--such as an escalation of the war in Viet Nam--they are not likely to be as high as they were in January.

Potatoes, which were comparatively expensive last summer, should be much cheaper. Sweet corn, celery, carrots, cabbage artichokes, cucumbers, greens, lettuce, onions, squash, sweet potatoes and tomatoes are moving to market in increased numbers.

France To Check Air Flights Monthly

PARIS AP -- France has informed its major NATO partners that as of June 1 authorization for allied military aircraft to fly over the land in France will be subject to monthly review, well informed sources reported today. Previously the permission has been on an annual basis.

The new restriction would permit the French to cut off overflight and landing privileges on 30-days' notice, the sources said. There was no indication that this would be done.

The French move, made Tuesday, was the latest in President Charles de Gaulle's overall plan to evict allied forces from French territory by next April 1.

The new French decision is aimed primarily at the United States, which has about 100,000 separate flights of planes and helicopters over France annually. But other NATO nations, such as West Germany, Britain and Canada, also would be affected.

The Church of the Transfiguration, more popularly known as the Little Church Around the Corner, was built in 1848.

THIS EMPTY house belonging to J. W. Wooten, Luther Street, was destroyed by fire shortly before noon Tuesday in an unusual way. He was in the process of tearing down the house, and had burned two tree stumps in front of the home. While dismantling the front porch, it fell to the ground and caught fire. Firemen Leonard Overby and Odis Parks are shown putting out the final blaze on the north side.

Paul Flowers' Greenhouse

From a new book "The District of Columbia From Its Glorious Past to the Present," by Allan Carpenter, published by Children's Press, I glean these toothsome fragments:

The White House light bill is going down despite President Johnson's concern over turning out electric lights.

Compared to what lights used to cost at the White House, today's light bill is a pittance. Before a central lighting system was installed in the nation's capital, an evening's entertainment by the President in one White House room -- the East Room -- required $100 worth of candles. And the White House has 132 rooms.

Washington shoppers today would be startled beyond measure to see President Johnson in a supermarket. But, in simpler days, shoppers thought nothing of meeting President William Henry Harrison with a basket doing the White House marketing.

The National Zoological Park is one of the finest zoos anywhere. It has Mohini -- the only white tiger on the public display in the world.

Beneath the Capital rotunda is a crypt and under this a tomb, intended to be the last resting place of George Washington. Because the family would not permit his body to be moved from Mt. Vernon, the tomb has never been used, except to hold the simple black funeral bier on which caskets have rested in state in the rotunda.

Bean soup has been on the House of Representatives menu since 1904 when Speaker Joe Cannon, decreed, "From now on -- hot or cold, rain, snow, or shine -- I want it on the menu every day." It has been on the Senate menu by decision of the Rules Committee every day since 1907.

The Federal Government in Washington today is almost 2,000 times as large as when it moved from Philadelphia in the summer of 1800. There were only 130 clerks in the entire Government force then.

One hundred years ago there were 7,000 Government employes in Washington. Today, there are close to 250,000 -- more than 35 times as many as under President Lincoln. One third of all people now employed in the Washington area work for the Government.

"The Agriculture Building has the most unusual history of all Government buildings" writes Mr. Carpenter. "Longtime Agriculture Secretary James 'Tama Jim' Wilson knew that the money appropriated by Congress for the new building was not enough. Instead of complaining, he had plans made for a much larger building, and had the two wings of this building constructed leaving a gaping hole in the middle.

"Wilson was one of the most able dealers with Congress in the country's history. When Congress inquired about the unsightly hole in the ground, Wilson calmly replied in his Scotch brogue, 'Ye kenna let it stand like that; 'twod be a national disgrace.' The needed money was appropriated and the rest of the building built."

The nine - million-ton Capitol dome rotates three to four inches every day. As the sun's warmth moves around the dome, it causes it to expand and rotate -- first south, then southwest, and west. And, as the retiring sun declines and disappears, it moves north, northeast, and east - finally returning to its original position.

FUTURE

When we use the word FUTURE, do we imply more than the tomorrows of the present life? I think we must if we expect ever to find any explanation for present imperfections, inequalities and apparent inconsistencies.

It would be difficult to reconcile oneself to the injustices we think we see in ths world if we could not anticipate the coming of a time when we will see things in proper focus.

Food Supplies Increase For Mothers' Day

By SALLY RYAN

NEW YORK AP -- It looks like a bright Mothers' Day weekend in the nation's food stores.

Supplies of many fresh vegetables and fruits have increased.

Best of all, beef, pork and egg prices are creeping down.

Prices of sliced bacon, cured hams and fresh pork butts are down as much as 4 cents a pound on the West Coast, and choice grade steer rounds, loins, ribs and chucks are headed down.

Eggs are down 1 to 10 cents a dozen. They may drop further the next month or so, but they are likely to go up later this summer.

Poultry prices have been higher than a year ago -- about 4 cents a pound for fryers. Many stores already are featuring specials on turkeys.

Fair weather in the Corn Belt cut the number of pigs moving to market this week, raising packers' prices. Pork supplies are down 2 to 4 per cent from last spring, but much better than they were last winter. Retail prices may edge up this summer, but barring an unexpected spurt in demand--such as an escalation of the war in Viet Nam--they are not likely to be as high as they were in January.

Potatoes, which were comparatively expensive last summer, should be much cheaper. Sweet corn, celery, carrots, cabbage artichokes, cucumbers, greens, lettuce, onions, squash, sweet potatoes and tomatoes are moving to market in increased numbers.

France To Check Air Flights Monthly

PARIS AP -- France has informed its major NATO partners that as of June 1 authorization for allied military aircraft to fly over the land in France will be subject to monthly review, well informed sources reported today. Previously the permission has been on an annual basis.

The new restriction would permit the French to cut off overflight and landing privileges on 30-days' notice, the sources said. There was no indication that this would be done.

The French move, made Tuesday, was the latest in President Charles de Gaulle's overall plan to evict allied forces from French territory by next April 1.

The new French decision is aimed primarily at the United States, which has about 100,000 separate flights of planes and helicopters over France annually. But other NATO nations, such as West Germany, Britain and Canada, also would be affected.

The Church of the Transfiguration, more popularly known as the Little Church Around the Corner, was built in 1848.

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
A Review of the 1964 Term

VIII. COMMUNISTS

Communists in the Supreme Court have had both their ups and their downs in recent years. During the 1964 term, the domestic Communists fared decidedly better than the foreign ones. In United States v. Brown, another bare 5-to-4 majority held unconstitutional a Federal statute that barred Communists from serving as union officers or employees, thereby overruling a 1950 Supreme Court case. The majority struck down the statute as a "bill of attainder," or a legislative punishment of Communists without trial.

Four dissenters, Justices White, Clark, Harlan and Stewart, held that the statute was not designed to punish Communists but to keep them out of key union positions where they could forment political or revolutionary strikes. It is a propensity that extends even to North America. Indeed, the Supreme Court of British Columbia has declared:

"It is quite possible that a Communist could appear superficially to be a good business agent for a union. His allegiance to communism, his belief that capitalism must be destroyed, would certainly not lead him to ameliorate his demands on capitalist employers. They might, indeed, induce him to exaggerate those demands to the breaking point in the hope of destroying, in the person of the employing corporation, a unit of capitalist society. His underlying beliefs must, for the reasons I have stated, make him ultimately inimical to free trade unions which flourish most luxuriantly in the atmosphere of capitalism."

The Court's answer to all of this is an extended historical analysis designed to prove that because some bills of attainder have had preventive as well as retributive functions, a statute that singles out a group with known revolutionary doctrine and keeps them out of sensitive positions provides for punishing them without trial. Of course, any country that has permitted Communists to obtain sensitive positions has soon found that such liberty is eagerly seized upon to foment a revolution, after which there is no further occasion for a trial because the revolution is an accomplished fact. In short, it is not generally possible to prove in the Anglo-American tradition that a Communist is a revolutionary until it is too late. One would have thought that facts so well known to all that judicial notice may be taken of them would provide an adequate substitute for formal proof in cases involving Communists as in other cases. Ignorance may be bliss, but a Communist take-over is not.

If reports reaching the marble palace in Washington about domestic Communists are scanty, at least a better flow of information is in evidence regarding foreign Communists. Speaking through Chief Justice Warren, the Court held that Congress could constitutionally limit foreign travel by Americans, and had delegated such power to the President and Secretary of State by giving them control over passports. The Chief Justice therefore upheld a State Department ban on travel to Cuba by an American "to satisfy my curiosity about the state of affiars in Cuba and to make me a better informed citizen."

The Chief Justice held:

"It is moreover, the judgment of the State Department that a major goal of the Castro regime is to export its Communist revolution to the rest of Latin America. The United States and other members of the Organization of American States have determined that travel between Cuba and the other countries of the Western Hemisphere is an important element in the spreading of subversion, and many have therefore undertaken measures to discourage such travel. It also cannot be forgotten that in the early days of the Castro regime, United States citizens were arrested and imprisoned without charges. We think, particularly in view of the President's statutory obligation to "use such means, not amounting to acts of war, as he may think necessary and proper" to secure the release of an American citizen unjustly deprived of his liberty by a foreign government, that the Secretary has justifiably concluded that travel to Cuba by American citizens might involve the nation in dangerous international incidents, and that the Constitution does not require him to validate passports for such travel."

DAEOC Grant Applied for

Lloyd Phillips, Assistant Director in charge of Program Development of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation, announced that DAEOC has submitted to the Kansas City Regional Office, a project totaling $1,137,573 of which $899,562 will be financed by Federal funds and $239,011 will be financed locally.

The project has a total of eight components, the largest being the Neighborhood Service Centers, for a 12 month duration. The idea of this particular Component is to involve the target area people or to involve the people that will receive the services.

Plans are to have 33 of these centers throughout the six county area.

Bill Graves, Assistant Director in charge of Project Administration, states the Medicare Component is almost finished. Approximately 4,000 Senior Citizens were signed through Social Security in Cape Girardeau from this area because of the great interest created through the Medicare Alert Program of OEO.

Mr. Earl Williams, Area Director, stated this project for the Neighborhood Service Centers, is the second of two large request since the area office has been formed. The other project was a Headstart Program for 19 schools in the area. The amount of the Headstart program was $428,853 of which $365,248 to be financed through the OEO and $63,405 provided locally.

Williams also said if these programs are all approved, this area will be directing 55 projects amounting to aproximately 2-1/2 million dollars. The 1965-66 funding year ended April 30, 1966.

Catch -All Bill Has Rough Time

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Reports from inside the House-Senate conference committee yesterday indicated rough sledding in the effort to get an acceptable compromise on the final catch-all appropriation bill.

The formal request for a conference came yesterday in the House but the conferees have been meeting informally since Tuesday night.

The House appropriations chairman, Rep. Bernard Simcoe, D-Callaway County, said the situation "looks rather rough. We met last night and this morning but haven't accomplished a thing."

The House recessed until 4 p.m. to give the conference committee more time to work out a solution.

House conferees got the majority floor leader, Rep. Mel Carnahan, D-Phelps County, to hold up a Senate-passed resolution calling for final adjournment at midnight last night.

They said passage of the resolution by the House would give the Senate conferees an upper hand on the appropriation bill.

The House did send to the governor a bill transferring a total of $134,792,062 in general revenue money for state aid to public schools.

Dog-Lover Keeps Pet Alive

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia AP--For six days a puppy, trapped in an animal snare, was kept alive by a crow.

Both animals belong to a couple living at a temporary road construction camp.

Recently the puppy disappeared. The couple searched in the tick brush surrounding the camp but no trace of it could be found.

Then they noticed that their pet crow, brought to them by a servant, did not seem to be eating normally.

The crow would take a bit of food in its beak, fly off and return a short while later to fetch another scrap of food. The crow, which normally ate his food straight out of the dish, would then repeat the performance.

The couple followed the crow when it flew off again with a prize piece of meat. Keeping just ahead of the couple, the crow led them to the spot where the dog lay trapped.

The dog, they found, was in almost perfect health.

Dr. William MacNae, zoologist at Johannesburg's Witwatersrand University commented: "This is further proof that birds especially crows, can become animal lovers themselves."

A zoo official said crows had a tendency to form unusual friendships and when put to the test were usually courageous and faithful allies.

Jerry E. Eaton

CAMP PENDLETON, CALIF. (FHTNC) -- Marine Private Jerry E. Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Eaton of 407 Thrower St., Dexter, Mo., has completed individual combat training here.

The four-week course included over 200 hours of instruction under simulated combat conditions, covering squad tactics, guerrilla warfare, day and night combat, patrolling and the use of infantry weapons.

His next stop is four weeks of basic specialist training in his military occupational field. Marines to be assigned to infantry units will be taught infantry subspecialties, such as the machine gun, grenade launcher, rifle or mortar. Marines to be assigned to highly technical specialties will be sent to military technical schools for their specialaist training.

Leathernecks bound for the Pacific will receive more training when they report to the Staging Battalion at Camp Pendleton, Calif. This training will emphasize jungle warfare, patrolling, and civic action based on experience gained in Vietnam.

"MEDIC!"

Space Age Bargain

By RONALD THOMPSON

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON, Tex. AP -- A "space age" classified ad you'll probably never see:

For Sale -- 1965 model, two-place space capsule, like new, bucket seats, one owner who drove it only to orbit and back, five million actual miles. Make offer.

Used spacecraft aren't on the market yet. Anyhow, not everyone needs a space flying machine -- at least for the foreseeable future.

And, who could afford one?

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration doesn't put a price tag on its spaceships but, generally speaking, the two-man Gemini vehicles cost about $25 million each, and the one-man Mercury capsules, about $7.5 million.

NASA has a growing stockpile of once-flown spaceships. The space agency has launched 16 manned and unmanned capsules in its Mercury and Gemini programs.

Though structurally sound, officials choose not to fly them again. This doesn't mean the historically valuable items set in some hangar gathering dust.

Most of the vehicles have found their final resting places in museums or display rooms. Some are taken on frequent tours in the United States and abroad.

"These are historic items," said Bob Gordon, director of Nasa's educational programs office at the Manned Spacecraft Center. "I don't think the government would ever want to sell them."

NASA, in the terms of one official, "gave" its unmanned Gemini 2 capsule to the Air Force for use in its manned orbiting laboratory project. The manufacturer is charging $11 million to overhaul it.

Officials advance several reasons for not wanting to rocket a man into space aboard a second-hand capsule. In the long run, they say, it is cheaper to build one. Some of the drawbacks:

Each vehicle is tailored for a specific mission. Some instruments and experimental equipment fitted into one are not on another. Seats are custom built for an individual astronaut's size and shape.

Now he's learning the fourth "R"...

RESPONSIBILITY

Reading, 'Riting, and 'Rithmetic may be kid stuff... but the fourth "R" ... Responsibility ... is man stuff!

A newspaperboy learns the meaning of responsibility from the very first day he shoulders a newspaper bag.

Now he is in business for himself—buying at wholesale and selling at retail—responsible for his own delivering, collecting, and selling.

Assisted by men who know how to work with boys... and an occasional "pat-on-the-back" from his family... this Junior Independent Merchant develops the self-discipline which prompt delivery requires—learns how to get along with people in all walks of life—appreciates the value of money—and assumes the responsibility for a growing business.

He's learning by doing... and he's doing fine!

If you have a son that you think might be interested in a newspaper route, why not write or phone us.

Space Age Bargain

By RONALD THOMPSON

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON, Tex. AP -- A "space age" classified ad you'll probably never see:

For Sale -- 1965 model, two-place space capsule, like new, bucket seats, one owner who drove it only to orbit and back, five million actual miles. Make offer.

Used spacecraft aren't on the market yet. Anyhow, not everyone needs a space flying machine -- at least for the foreseeable future.

And, who could afford one?

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration doesn't put a price tag on its spaceships but, generally speaking, the two-man Gemini vehicles cost about $25 million each, and the one-man Mercury capsules, about $7.5 million.

NASA has a growing stockpile of once-flown spaceships. The space agency has launched 16 manned and unmanned capsules in its Mercury and Gemini programs.

Though structurally sound, officials choose not to fly them again. This doesn't mean the historically valuable items set in some hangar gathering dust.

Most of the vehicles have found their final resting places in museums or display rooms. Some are taken on frequent tours in the United States and abroad.

"These are historic items," said Bob Gordon, director of Nasa's educational programs office at the Manned Spacecraft Center. "I don't think the government would ever want to sell them."

NASA, in the terms of one official, "gave" its unmanned Gemini 2 capsule to the Air Force for use in its manned orbiting laboratory project. The manufacturer is charging $11 million to overhaul it.

Officials advance several reasons for not wanting to rocket a man into space aboard a second-hand capsule. In the long run, they say, it is cheaper to build one. Some of the drawbacks:

Each vehicle is tailored for a specific mission. Some instruments and experimental equipment fitted into one are not on another. Seats are custom built for an individual astronaut's size and shape.

THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MISSOURI

RESOLUTION

A resolution declaring the necessity for the construction of 1½" hotmix asphaltic pavement on 6" soil cement base with concrete curb and gutter on the west side only of Dona Street from Malone to Matthews in accordance with plans and specifications in the City of Sikeston, Missouri; stating the nature of the improvement; the estimated cost and providing that payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills levied and assessed against the abutting property. Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Sikeston, State of Missouri, as follows: SECTION 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said Street necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston. SECTION 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement. SECTION 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $3.75 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement. SECTION 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the statutes of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement. SECTION 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri. SECTION 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that it shall be published for seven consecutive insertions. Read the first, second and third times and passed and approved this 2nd day of May, 1966. Approved: Kendall Sikes, Mayor; Attest: John W. Vaughn, City Clerk. 187 inc 193

Now he's learning the fourth "R"...

RESPONSIBILITY

Reading, 'Riting, and 'Rithmetic may be kid stuff... but the fourth "R" ... Responsibility ... is man stuff!

A newspaperboy learns the meaning of responsibility from the very first day he shoulders a newspaper bag.

Now he is in business for himself—buying at wholesale and selling at retail—responsible for his own delivering, collecting, and selling.

Assisted by men who know how to work with boys... and an occasional "pat-on-the-back" from his family... this Junior Independent Merchant develops the self-discipline which prompt delivery requires—learns how to get along with people in all walks of life—appreciates the value of money—and assumes the responsibility for a growing business.

He's learning by doing... and he's doing fine!

If you have a son that you think might be interested in a newspaper route, why not write or phone us.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Our son is three years old and I am worried about him. When Kurt was born his father made it plain that he was going to raise his son to be a man and not a pansy. My husband feels that boys should not be cuddled or kissed or shown any affection. When Kurt falls down and cries my husband ignores him and makes me do the same. Even when the child is sick I am not permitted to rock him.

Last week Kurt had a cold but his father insisted that I give him a cold bath as usual and not pamper him. He got a chill and his cold very nearly developed into pneumonia.

I believe in discipline but I think my husband is carrying things too far. Kurt stutters when he speaks to his father and I am sure he is terrified of him. My husband reads your column and agrees with some of the things you say. It would help a great deal if you published my letter and gave us your opinion.-- KURT'S MOTHER

Dear Mother: Ask your doctor to talk to your husband at once. If something isn't done to change your husband's thinking, you are going to have a seriously disturbed boy on your hands.

Every child needs affection. Cuddling and gentleness does not make boys queer. Harshness, rigidity and an absence of father love can drive male children to identify with their mothers -- and THIS can cause homosexuality.

Dear Ann Landers: Since that letter from your daughter Margo appeared, (she disagreed with your stand on sitters) I'll bet you've had all the sitter letters, pro and con, that you care to see for the next 100 years. I do hope you will print one more, however.

My girl friend Gloria and I both sit for women in the neighborhood. Gloria grew up here and she knows more people than I do. On two occasions last winter Gloria called me and asked if I wanted to sit for a couple of women who were in a spot. They had called her but she was booked. I was free and said, "Yes, thanks a lot."

Well, both women liked me and I got along with their children better than anyone they had ever hired. They called me back regularly after that. Now Gloria is mad because she says I "stole her jobs." Do you feel I should have turned the ladies down? -- SHORT ONE FRIEND

Dear Short: Well -- here we go again? I do NOT feel that you should have turned the ladies down, but it would have been a good idea to suggest that they call Gloria and give her first call on the subsequent jobs. Having done that you would have discharged your responsibility to Gloria.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Prayer
For Today From The Upper Room

Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom.--(Colossians 3:16)

PRAYER: Lord, we thank Thee for our homes. As we see the failings of the other members, may we remember our own weaknesses. Grant to us wisdom. Above all, give us the spirit of love that forgives and helps. In Jesus' name. Amen.

To the Editor:

Dear Charlie:

I'd like to add a note too, expressing my "appreciation and thanks to your paper, The Sikeston Standard, for having a part in bringing the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra to our town. Yes, as Keith Collins wrote, "it was a shame more people didn't turn out and take advantage of this great event in Sikeston, as it was quite a "Nite of Music." I'll go a little further than others that wrote and say too, "It's just a shame that our town doesn't have a nice Civic Center building or Community Center that would seat 800 - 900 people with a big stage, the latest in lighting effects, and good accoustics." I'm sure in the not too distant future that this building will be a reality here, as someone here in the Sikeston Bootheel area liking the arts will donate a huge contribution to build it, or at least start the drive for such a center. -- (This does happen so many, many times where someone donates $100,000 to $500,000 and then it's named for them. -- I'm thinking now of the new one in Houston, "The Kaulaa Center" where she donated one million to the art for the building -- and Queeny Towers in St. Louis, where Mr. Queeny donated $500,000 to build that addition to the hospital -- and a leading university received a huge donation for a library in memory of a ladies son.) -- That actually brings me to the reason I write this. This week another big event in the arts will happen in Sikeston. It's the Little Theatre's presentation of "The King and I" with a cast of 70 and some 75 others helping with the sets, costumes, make up, publicity, dances, lighting, painting, prompting, building of sets, directing and music. (In items of money all this could amounts of 15 or 20 thousand dollars). I won't attempt to name anyone in the cast, as they are all great, and what beautiful singing and acting as this play begins to "shape up" for opening night Friday. Four names do stand out night now and they are Hope Terrell, Ernie Elledge, Jo Ann Fox and Richard Fussell -- they are directors and set designers. I would like to say though, that Thedamay Cleek has certainly been writing some great articles for your paper about "The King and I" and let me tell you the words she's been using have not been exaggerated, such as "Great, Beautiful, Magnificient, Gorgeous, Vivid, Powerful, Colorful, dynamic, etc. I've been trying to find a word that she didn't use that night add to it -- all I can come up with is that long word from "Mary Poppins" -- that is "Supercalifragilisticexpevalidous" -- Yes, this "King and I" is certainly going to be Supercalifragilisticexpiivalidous." (I hope that word means what it sounds like -- the biggest and greatest."

I know many people including myself journey to Memphis, St. Louis and Kansas City to see shows at the open air theatres but I'll tell them this, "I hope anyone that likes any-kind of singing or acting will see this production. It certainly ranks with the best in the Little Theatre's repetorie of past productions. (Two of the best of which I think or can remember right now were "The Miracle Worker" and last years "Sound of Music." There will be extra performances for this one too and the tickets will be $1.50 adults and $1.00 children and these can be purchased at the door or from any member. So I'm asking everyone to try to attend this "Supercalifragilisticexpivalidous" play. -- Thanks always for the good publicity you give to everyone on any civic project.

Sincerely Yours
John W. Davis

P. S. Just in case someone writes back and says "Why doesn't he make the First Big donation," I'll say this, "If I had it I would."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Our son is three years old and I am worried about him. When Kurt was born his father made it plain that he was going to raise his son to be a man and not a pansy. My husband feels that boys should not be cuddled or kissed or shown any affection. When Kurt falls down and cries my husband ignores him and makes me do the same. Even when the child is sick I am not permitted to rock him.

Last week Kurt had a cold but his father insisted that I give him a cold bath as usual and not pamper him. He got a chill and his cold very nearly developed into pneumonia.

I believe in discipline but I think my husband is carrying things too far. Kurt stutters when he speaks to his father and I am sure he is terrified of him. My husband reads your column and agrees with some of the things you say. It would help a great deal if you published my letter and gave us your opinion.-- KURT'S MOTHER

Dear Mother: Ask your doctor to talk to your husband at once. If something isn't done to change your husband's thinking, you are going to have a seriously disturbed boy on your hands.

Every child needs affection. Cuddling and gentleness does not make boys queer. Harshness, rigidity and an absence of father love can drive male children to identify with their mothers -- and THIS can cause homosexuality.

Dear Ann Landers: Since that letter from your daughter Margo appeared, (she disagreed with your stand on sitters) I'll bet you've had all the sitter letters, pro and con, that you care to see for the next 100 years. I do hope you will print one more, however.

My girl friend Gloria and I both sit for women in the neighborhood. Gloria grew up here and she knows more people than I do. On two occasions last winter Gloria called me and asked if I wanted to sit for a couple of women who were in a spot. They had called her but she was booked. I was free and said, "Yes, thanks a lot."

Well, both women liked me and I got along with their children better than anyone they had ever hired. They called me back regularly after that. Now Gloria is mad because she says I "stole her jobs." Do you feel I should have turned the ladies down? -- SHORT ONE FRIEND

Dear Short: Well -- here we go again? I do NOT feel that you should have turned the ladies down, but it would have been a good idea to suggest that they call Gloria and give her first call on the subsequent jobs. Having done that you would have discharged your responsibility to Gloria.

To the Editor:

Dear Charlie:

I'd like to add a note too, expressing my "appreciation and thanks to your paper, The Sikeston Standard, for having a part in bringing the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra to our town. Yes, as Keith Collins wrote, "it was a shame more people didn't turn out and take advantage of this great event in Sikeston, as it was quite a "Nite of Music." I'll go a little further than others that wrote and say too, "It's just a shame that our town doesn't have a nice Civic Center building or Community Center that would seat 800 - 900 people with a big stage, the latest in lighting effects, and good accoustics." I'm sure in the not too distant future that this building will be a reality here, as someone here in the Sikeston Bootheel area liking the arts will donate a huge contribution to build it, or at least start the drive for such a center. -- (This does happen so many, many times where someone donates $100,000 to $500,000 and then it's named for them. -- I'm thinking now of the new one in Houston, "The Kaulaa Center" where she donated one million to the art for the building -- and Queeny Towers in St. Louis, where Mr. Queeny donated $500,000 to build that addition to the hospital -- and a leading university received a huge donation for a library in memory of a ladies son.) -- That actually brings me to the reason I write this. This week another big event in the arts will happen in Sikeston. It's the Little Theatre's presentation of "The King and I" with a cast of 70 and some 75 others helping with the sets, costumes, make up, publicity, dances, lighting, painting, prompting, building of sets, directing and music. (In items of money all this could amounts of 15 or 20 thousand dollars). I won't attempt to name anyone in the cast, as they are all great, and what beautiful singing and acting as this play begins to "shape up" for opening night Friday. Four names do stand out night now and they are Hope Terrell, Ernie Elledge, Jo Ann Fox and Richard Fussell -- they are directors and set designers. I would like to say though, that Thedamay Cleek has certainly been writing some great articles for your paper about "The King and I" and let me tell you the words she's been using have not been exaggerated, such as "Great, Beautiful, Magnificient, Gorgeous, Vivid, Powerful, Colorful, dynamic, etc. I've been trying to find a word that she didn't use that night add to it -- all I can come up with is that long word from "Mary Poppins" -- that is "Supercalifragilisticexpevalidous" -- Yes, this "King and I" is certainly going to be Supercalifragilisticexpiivalidous." (I hope that word means what it sounds like -- the biggest and greatest."

I know many people including myself journey to Memphis, St. Louis and Kansas City to see shows at the open air theatres but I'll tell them this, "I hope anyone that likes any kind of singing or acting will see this production. It certainly ranks with the best in the Little Theatre's repetorie of past productions. (Two of the best of which I think or can remember right now were "The Miracle Worker" and last years "Sound of Music." There will be extra performances for this one too and the tickets will be $1.50 adults and $1.00 children and these can be purchased at the door or from any member. So I'm asking everyone to try to attend this "Supercalifragilisticexpivalidous" play. -- Thanks always for the good publicity you give to everyone on any civic project.

Sincerely Yours

Today In U.S. History

Today is Thursday, May 5th, the 125th day of 1966. There are 240 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1936, Italy proclaimed the conquest of Ethiopia.

On this date

In 1775, Benjamin Franklin returned from London and a long and vain effort against arbitrary taxation of the colonies.

In 1821, Napoleon Bonaparte died on the island of St. Helena.

In 1847, the American medical association was organized.

In 1942, the rationing of sugar began throughout the United States.

In 1955, the Federal Republic of Germany --Western Germany --became a sovereign state.

Ten years ago . . .Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson decisively defeated Gov. Allan Shivers for the leadership of the Texas Democratic party in precinct conventions.

Five years ago . . in a sub-orbital flight, Commander Alan B. Shepard Jr. was rocketed 116 miles above the earth in a Mercury Capsule and landed safely in the Atlantic.

One year ago . . two contending forces in the Dominican Republic signed a formal truce agreement -- but fighting continued in Santo Domingo.

MOTHER'S DAY

There is a certain Day, that comes once a year.
It's called Mother's Day, for all Mothers dear.
Let's do our very best, to our Mothers be kind,
On Mother's Day, for your Mother and mine.

Now there's only one other, that has greater love, than our own dear Mother--
And that's God above.
I know He sent mine, from Heaven to me, her sweet
Smiling face I keep longing to see.

If I took all the money I've earned thru the years,
And gave it to Mother, for her sorrows and tears
I could never repay her, for all that's she's done--
The way that she raised us, when we were young.

So always be kind, and good to your Mother,
For after she's gone, you'll never have another,
That will take her place completely--I know--
For I lost my mother a long time ago.

I know she's in Heaven with the Angels tonight--
One of the stars that's shining so bright--
Guiding my footsteps--
Where-ever I go.
Dear Mother up in Heaven--
Here on earth, we miss you so.

Henry Killian

NEW RECORD—Columbus, Ohio, housewife Jerrie Mock beams over a welcome-home bouquet after setting a new women's world distance flight record. Mrs. Mock, a grandmother, already holds record for a previous around-the-world flight.

Today In U.S. History

Today is Thursday, May 5th, the 125th day of 1966. There are 240 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1936, Italy proclaimed the conquest of Ethiopia.

On this date

In 1775, Benjamin Franklin returned from London and a long and vain effort against arbitrary taxation of the colonies.

In 1821, Napoleon Bonaparte died on the island of St. Helena.

In 1847, the American medical association was organized.

In 1942, the rationing of sugar began throughout the United States.

In 1955, the Federal Republic of Germany --Western Germany --became a sovereign state.

Ten years ago . . .Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson decisively defeated Gov. Allan Shivers for the leadership of the Texas Democratic party in precinct conventions.

Five years ago . . in a suborbital flight, Commander Alan B. Shepard Jr. was rocketed 116 miles above the earth in a Mercury Capsule and landed safely in the Atlantic.

One year ago . . two contending forces in the Dominican Republic signed a formal truce agreement -- but fighting continued in Santo Domingo.

MOTHER'S DAY

There is a certain Day, that comes once a year.
It's called Mother's Day, for all Mothers dear.
Let's do our very best, to our Mothers be kind,
On Mother's Day, for your Mother and mine.

Now there's only one other, that has greater love, than our own dear Mother--
And that's God above.
I know He sent mine, from Heaven to me, her sweet
Smiling face I keep longing to see.

If I took all the money I've earned thru the years,
And gave it to Mother, for her sorrows and tears
I could never repay her, for all that's she's done--
The way that she raised us, when we were young.

So always be kind, and good to your Mother,
For after she's gone, you'll never have another,
That will take her place completely--I know--
For I lost my mother a long time ago.

I know she's in Heaven with the Angels tonight--
One of the stars that's shining so bright--
Guiding my footsteps--
Where-ever I go.
Dear Mother up in Heaven--
Here on earth, we miss you so.

said, authorities in Saigon referred the question of disclosure to Washington--apparently after press dispatches from the scene had reported it. Washington authorities reportedly instructed headquarters in Saigon not to volunteer information on the incident but to say what had happened if asked.

The policy covering this operation was made known by the State Department last Dec. 21 --in as obscure a manner as officials could devise. There had been many reports and complaints of Viet Cong forces taking refuge in the Cambodian jungles as well as complaints by Combodia of border violations by American or South Vietnamese forces.

Finally, when a State Department spokesman was pressed to reveal what orders U.S. commanders had, he replied that "American military commanders throughout the world have authority to take those actions essential in the exercise of the inherent right of self-defense to protect their forces."

This was understood to mean that American troops engaged in search and destroy operations in the Vietnamese jungles that have long formed a Viet Cong stronghold near the Cambodian border could fire back if they came under attack on the Cambodian side.

Dispatches from Saigon said there had been earlier reports of such firing but that none had drawn official confirmation until the spokesman's statement earlier this week.

U.S. air operations over Laos began in May 1964. The State Department said at that time that the neutralist government of Laos had requested aerial reconnaissance to get information on positions of Communist troops.

That information was made available here after Communist China broadcast that Communist forces in Laos had fired on U.S. aircraft.

In early June 1964, an unarmed reconnaissance plane was reported shot down by Communist fire. The next day a U.S. Navy jet fighter also was reported shot down. On June 8 Washington officials said that fighter planes escorting the unarmed reconnaissance aircraft had received orders to fire on Communist military installations when necessary to protect the reconnaissance craft.

Westmoreland was pictured as believing the hope of being sent home after a year in the war is a major factor in high U. S. troop morale in Viet Nam.

In outlining the sources of replacements for Army troops in Viet Nam, Wheeler said some of the men that are training at various camps around the country will be part of this replacement group.

"Some will be people who have returned from Europe," he said. "Some will be people who are taken from other stations such as Panama and Alaska."

He indicated that the replacements will be shuttled into Viet Nam on an individual, rather than a unit basis.

Americans killed, 589 wounded and seven missing or captured last week compared with 35 killed, 547 wounded, and eight missing or captured in the week of April 17-23.

Since Jan. 1, 1961, a total of 3,152 Americans have been killed in battle or died of combat wounds.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 227 government troops killed and 29 missing compared with 93 killed and 33 missing last week wounded figures are not announced.

Other allied forces reported two dead and 11 wounded, down from 32 killed and 19 wounded in the previous week.

Communist losses declined to 456 reported killed and 98 captured. The week before, Viet Cong casualties were put at 694 killed and 69 captured.

The enemy figures dropped below this in the week of Jan. 16-22 when the allies reported 408 Communists killed. The highest enemy death toll came in the week of March 20-26 when 1,988 were reported killed.

The B52 raid was carried out in the Communist C zone in Tay Ninh province where troops of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division are trying to root out the Viet Cong in Operation Birmingham.

It was the fifth day in a row and the eighth day of the past nine that the eight-jet bombers returned to the area from their bases on Guam.

On Tuesday and again Wednesday, all Air Force strikes against North Viet Nam were called off because of the monsoon weather there. The Navy flew only eight missions Tuesday and 22 Wednesday in the north, hitting mostly at Costal targets.

In South Viet Nam, U.S. pilots flew 300 sorties Wednesday and South Vietnamese pilots flew 207 against Viet Cong targets.

American authorities believe one reason for the climb is the worsening of the Viet Cong's military position.

A major factor also is the "chieu hoi," or open arms, program undertaken two years ago by the Saigon government under American sponsorship.

Using psychological warfare --largely leaflets and front-line loudspeakers -- the government promises Viet Cong defectors good treatment. It also encourages them to bring over weapons, offering rewards up to 20,000 piastres ($274) for a 57mm recoilless rifle.

The propaganda also plays on the hardships of life under the Viet Cong.

A returnee, as he is called by the South Vietnamese government, is first sent to an "open arms" center for 45 days to be checked and rehabilitated.

Then he is sent back to his native locality if it is in government hands. If not, he is resettled elsewhere.

The government is building 16 resettlement centers for returnees and their families. Each center will accommodate 100 families.

The returnee is given a small sum of money and rice for six months. He is exempt from the army draft for a year. If he joins a propaganda team to lure other Viet Cong defectors he is given a salary, an allowance and an 18-month draft deferment.
